A BRUTAL ASSAULT

Constable Wright May Die of His Injuries Inflicted by Martin Warner, of Millington.

In the annals of Clayton's history, the citizens of that railroad centre have not been so much aroused by a crime, as they have by the outrageous and murderous assault committed upon Constable James D. Wright, of that town, on Saturday night by Martin Warner, a butcher. Last week Mrs. Warner left her husband and went to Wilmington, as his inhuman treatment could no longer be tolererated by the long suffering wife, who time after time had left Warner, only to return upon his promise to treat her better. When Mrs. Warner decided to leave her home last week, she told her husband it was the final chapter of their unhappy marriage.

Warner was a tenant of Constable Wright, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for recorder of deeds of Kent County. The butcher accused Mr. Wright and others of influencing his (Warner's) wife to leave him, but was later heard to say he was glad Mrs. Warner had gone. On Thursday Warner closed out his butcher shop and advertised to sell his fixtures, also several horses and various other articles, as his business, by his intemperate habits, had gone to pieces.

On Saturday he visited Wilmington, and upon his return to Clayton alleged he had seen Mrs. Warner, and that his marital troubles had been satisfactorily adjusted. Meeting Constable Wright, with Representative John Hutchinson, he invited the two men into his house in a very friendly manner, stating to Mr. Wright he had a little matter of business he wished to settle with him. The three men were seated in Warner's sitting room, Wright upon the couch, when Warner walked over to him and, without a word of warning, struct the constable a terrific blow in the face, knocking the officer of the law senseless. Warner then proceeded to bat the insensible man's face into a jelly.

Representative Hutchinson, for the moment, was dazed by the Judas-like proceedings of Warner, who posed as a friend of both men. He made a vain attempt to stay Warner in his brutal attack on Wright, but was no match for the infuriated man. Running out into the street, Mr. Hutchinson called for help, but, strange to say, no one dared to enter Warner's home. Warner, thinking he had killed Wright, left the prostrate form lying on the floor and coolly walked to the hotel and bought a drink.

In his absence Mr. Wright's friends rushed into the house and the battered and bruised constable was carried to his home. For some unaccountable reason no warrant was issued for Warner until Monday afternoon, when the affair became generally known, and then there was considerable excitement in Clayton.

A special from Dover says: Constables arrived here this afternoon having in their custody Martin L. Warner, proprietor of a meat store in Clayton, and the man who on Saturday night called in to his store former Constable James D. Wright, a prominent citizen of Clayton, where he assaulted him, beating him into insensibility. Mr. Wright's condition is still pronounced critical by Dr. Harmonson, the attending physician, and Warner is committed to jail to await the result of his injuries.

Martin Warner removed to Clayton from Millington and with his wife figured prominently in our Circuit Court in the noted damage suit against Mr. Moore, of Millington, in which they were given a verdict for $975.
