TO MARK GRAVE OF MARYLAND PATRIOT

Granite Slab for Resting place of Philip Reed—Stone for Caulk's Field, Kent County Maryland.

Phillip Reed, a general in the service of the State and colonel of Americans at Caulk's Field, where he defeated the British in 1814, when their leader, Sir Peter Parker, was killed, is soon to have his grave marked by a granite slab, which is now being prepared, and his battle field is to be marked by a monumental stone which is in process of preparation. Mr. Wm. M. Marine was in Kent county last week, where he was the guest of Capt. Columbus A. Leary, residing near Edesville, and while there he attended a meeting of the monumental committee in Chestertown, at which the dedication was discussed with other features of that ceremony.

The services at the grave of General Reed will be simple and unostentatious. Those at Caulk's Field will be elaborate. It is expected to hold them on August 31, the anniversary of the battle, which took place shortly after midnight, or at what is known as civil time. The exercises, so far as contemplated, will be singing "My Country, Tis of Thee," by those in attendance; the giving of an account of the movement to erect the memorials; the history of the stones, and an oration on General Reed's life and character, and short remarks from the presidents of two patriotic societies of Baltimore. The ceremonial features are not absolutely resolved on, but are outlined as given.

Mr. Marine and Captain Leary went over the battle ground Thursday morning. The latter had previously ascertained the spot where Sir Peter was killed, and where the British dead were buried, which he had marked with a stone. By the report of Colonel Reed no difficulty was experienced in finding the places occupied by the two lines. The contour of the field is such that the positions of the two forces can be readily understood. The marker will be placed near the road, at the left of the American line. The Caulk field property is owned by Mrs. Thomas Hill, of Baltimore. The old brick gable house, which stood during the battle, still stands in good order. The farm is two miles from Tolchester. Mrs. Hill is a native of Kent county, and she and her husband have ardently supported the enterprise and proven enthusiastic in its support. They will deed the land on which the marker will stand to the County Commissioners, who, it is understood, will be asked to take charge of it.

Mr. Marine made a visit to Huntsfield's estate, the home of General Reed and where he died, situated on the Chesapeake Bay, adjoining Rock Hall. It is now owned by Mr. Stevens, of Baltimore. The Reed mansion was destroyed by fire, but the 400 acres are full of interest and beauty.

On the way he passed "Liberty Hall," the ancestral home of the late Mayor Hodges. It is in the hands of strangers, and shows visible signs of neglect. The mansion was destroyed by fire. The Mayor had the bones of his ancestors conveyed from the farm to St. Paul's Churchyard and interred in a lot, and over them he placed a monument to proclaim that five generations of Hodges were beneath the stone.

St. Paul's Church is of brick, and was built in 1689. There are giant oaks in the graveyard over 500 years old, one of them nearer a thousand years old than five hundred. It is a charming spot containing some very old graves, and it has the English appearance. The pastor is the Rev. C. T. Denroch, who is of English birth. To him is due the energetic start and progress of the movement which has culminated so successfully.

In Memory of William Stevens

Mr. William Stevens, who departed this life on the evening of July 28th, was for many years one of the most prominent men in Kent County. At one time he was Register of Wills for the county, also Judge of the Orphans Court and at all times a devoted friend to what he believed to be the best interest of the county. He was largely interested in Agriculture, and had an extensive acquaintance among the farmers of this section. Several years ago failing health compelled him to retire from active life, but he still retained his warm interest in the activities about him. He was a zealous member of the Methodist Church, and contributed to its welfare, both by personal service, and by his means. As a husband, father and friend, he was loving devoted and loyal to a remarkable degree; and those who have experienced the genial hospitality of his home will not readily forget the hearty welcome that all received alike; whether the friend of years, or "The stranger within his gates." "With a hand and heart" ever open to melting charity he will be sadly missed by many whose lot has been brightened, and their sorrows lightened by his benefaction.

To those sad ones of his household he will leave a host of tender recollections that will hallow and sanctify his memory, and to those bereaved ones all sympathies must turn, especially to the devoted wife, whose loving care ministered so sweetly to his declining years. May He who has taken from them their loved one, console them in His own good time, and bring to their sad hearts "The peace that passeth all understanding."

"Down sail: the sheathed anchor uncovered,
For the stress of the voyage has passed;
Life, like a tempest of ocean,
Hath outbreathed its ultimate blast.
There's but a faint sobbing seaward,
While the calm of the tide deepened leeward,
And behold! like the welcoming quiver
Of heart pulses throbs through the river,
Those lights in the harbor at last,
The heavenly harbor at last.

L. R. SHEWELL.

Whistled in the Pulpit.—Rev. V. S. Collins, pastor of the M. E. Church at Smyrna, caused something of a sensation last Sunday by whistling in the pulpit. He whistled in imitation of a meadow lark, and took as the text, "Thou, God, Seest Me." He said the words had been suggested to him by the notes of the lark on a visit to Smyrna Landing, and he then proceeded to preach an excellent sermon.
