A Great Corset Sale !

"Well, Mary, how are you? What's the news? Well I was down to to Lizzie's the other day and she was telling me of the Corsets she bought of Westcott & Dodd and it wasn't long before I became further convinced, they had the greatest Corsets, most comfortable and the cheapest Corset sold and I just made up my mind to buy one set and now I am fully convinced they are the best and my advice is that every lady ask for one pair or the other displayed in Westcott & Dodd's window.

AT OAKDALE AGAIN.

Mr. Edwin Warfield Holds Reunion of Former Slaves—Ten of them Were at the "Home Coming" And Enjoyed the Day Amid Scenes of Yore.

FOURTEEN OF THE 70 SURVIVE.

Oakdale, the home of Mr. Edwin Warfield, president of the Fidelity and Deposit Company of Maryland and one of the prominent candidates for the Gubernational nomination of 1903 was the scene of a unique gathering Saturday—the reunion of Mr. Warfield and his family with the old colored men and women who were slaves on the Warfield plantations before the Civil War.

For several years Mr. Warfield has been planning such a coming together of the present members of the family and the survivors of the house and field servants who were born and bred on his father's and grandfather's estates. But until this summer it has been impossible to realize the project. After considerable difficulty he located the men and women who were born prior to 1862 either at Oakdale, then the home of his father, Mr. Albert Warfield, or at the adjoining estate, Cherry Grove, the home of his grandfather, Mr. Joshua Warfield. He found that 14 of the 70 slaves who were employed on the two places are still living, and to each of these he sent a written invitation to be present at the "home-coming." And all of the fourteen except four were present.

FOUR ABSENTEES.

One of the absentees was Nicholas Dorsey, who was a caretaker of Mr Warfield during his childhood. Dorsey is now over 70 years old and lives in Virginia. He had accepted the invitation, but as he did not appear at the station with the rest it is supposed that he missed connections. Two other absentees were old Aunt Comfort and and her sister Louise, both of whom are well on in the eighties. They live in Montgomery county, but are too feeble to make even short journeys.

Richard Harriday, who completed the quartet of absentees, lives in Washington, and in sending his regrets to the invitation stated that it was impossible for him to be on hand at the reunion because of work that he had contracted to do on the White House improvements.

His brother, Charles A. Harriday, who has been a trusted messenger in the office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue since 1869, joined the company that went out to Oakdale from Baltimore. Three of the survivors are still employed on the old place, and these awaited the homecoming of the rest with the greatest interest.

RECEIVED AT OAKDALE.

As Oakdale is about six miles from Woodbine, the nearest railroad station, arrangements had been made for the old people to take one of the early morning trains, and carriages were on hand at Woodbine to take them up to the house. Here they were welcomed by Mr. and Mrs. Warfield, Mr. Warfield's brother, Mr. John Warfield; his sister, Mrs. M. Gill, and her husband; Mrs. Nicodemus, and the Misses Nicodemus, Mrs. Warfield's mother and sisters, and a number of young people who were guests at the house.

CALLING THE ROLL.

One of the events of the day was the calling of the roll of the men and women who were living on the place between 1846 and war times, and of the 70 it was found that the 14 with whom Mr. Warfield had been able to communicate were the only survivors. The old folks talked over their relationships, and nearly everybody found that he was a cousin or was kin of some sort to the rest of the people that had come back. Their talk went back to the old days, and in homely but affectionate terms they spoke of the kindly treatment of "Old Marse" and "Old Miss" in the days gone by. Their talk went back to the old holiday times and to the big gatherings at Christmas. Their recollection was especially vivid of the hour on Christmas mornings when they would go into the library to say "Crismus Gif" to "Mars Albert," and of the gifts and good cheer that followed the greeting. Another thing that brought back the old days was the sight of the old sideboard in the dining room. Many a time when they were children, they said, "Old Miss" had given them goodies out of it.

SHE SAW "MARS ALBERT."

It was the first time since their emancipation that any of them, except the servants who are still employed at Oakdale, had been back to the old place. To every one of them it was home, and all that was lacking was the presence of the old Master and Mistress. As they were going through the house one of the old women—old Aunt Betty—stopped before the portrait of Mr. Warfield's father and said, with a little catch in her voice, "Fah de Lawd! Der's Mars Albert." And, while the rest went on, the old woman who had been nurse and trusted servant remained spellbound in front of the picture.

GENUINE MARYLAND DINNER.

A genuine old Maryland dinner—gumbo soup, fried chicken, old ham, cured on the place; corn, lima beans and other vegetables fresh from the garden—and for desert apple dumplings and sauce, winding up with luscious watermelon, was served in the kitchen of the old quarters, which are still standing.

"AUTO" BURIED BESIDE HIM.

The members of the Bleichroder family have caused the authmobile that killed Baron George VonBleichroder, the well-known banker and sportsman, near Cologne, June 11 last, to be buried beside his grave in the grounds of Schloss Dueren, not far from Cologne.

All the members of the family have given away or sold their automobiles, of which they had several. Baron James Von Bleichroder disposed of a magnificent French racing machine that cost $11,000 for $1,500.
