NEWSY ITEMS OF EVERY DAY LIFE.

How City Girls Made the Horse Drink —Hog Cholera on the Peninsula— Kieffer Pear Shipment, etc.

Mr. John Ahern, of Millington, has a very prolific squash vine in his garden. A single seed sprouted voluntarily last spring and as a result he has a vine forty feet long, which has produced seven large squashes. The three largest measure 62, 60 and 59 inches, respectively, in circumference. Excellent work for a single little seed.

Hog cholera is becoming alarming in some sections of Talbot county, mainly in Easton and St. Michael's districts. Samuel M. Tull, manager for Col. Charles A. Henderson, at "The Rest," on Miles river, and W. W. Lynn, on the farm adjoining, are principal sufferers. He had 250 fine hogs. Two weeks ago sickness appeared among them and 90 of them have died—hogs that weighed from 150 to 200 pounds. Mr. Tull cannot account for the disease. They were in a field, where there is a constantly running stream of pure water. Other farmers are loosing hogs daily. They are at a loss to know what measures to take to prevent a further spread of the disease.

Farmers near Bryantown are losing their hogs with the cholera. Mr. J H, R Embert has lost over $400 worth of hogs, and Mr. William H. Walters, about $150.

George Hanson, of near Rising Sun, has a large pear orchard of about 12,000 trees. Mr. Hanson will harvest from 30,000 to 40,000 baskets of Keiffer pears from this orchard.

One of the good jokes the farmers of Southern Pennsylvania are enjoying, is on three young ladies who spent the summer with their country friends. They "drove up to an old mill, and went into raptures over its picturesqueness. Their dress and speech announced that they were from the city. The horse, relieved from the constant sawing at his bit, walked toward a watering trough, but could not get his muzzle down to drink. The drivers noticed he wanted water, but did not know enough about harness to undo his check rein. First, two of them tried pulling his head down by tugging at his ears. Then one tried lifting water in her hand for him to lap. When her companions walked to the back of the carriage and raised both rear wheels so the horse could be tipped head first into the trough it proved too much for the miller, who had been looking from a window, and he came to help them. He laughed so much, though, that he could hardly undo the check rein, and afterward found it too good a joke to keep."

G. W. Hend, of Wisconsin, says: "In order to get the best and quickest returns from hogs, begin fattening the pigs as soon as they are born. I raised pure-blooded Poland-Chinas of medium size, and never attempted to keep more than I could handle well. My brood sows were kept in a thrifty condition. They were not fat, but are far from being poor. I fed a little whole corn and a slop made of rye meal and milk. When the pigs begin to try to eat (and they will do this when only a few days old), I fix a place where they could go and eat by themselves. I first gave them skimmilk and then gradually added rye meal increasing the amount as the pig grows. As soon as they are large enough to eat it, I add a little corn but I find that I can make the most rapid growth with rye meal if I have plenty of milk to go with it. If the meal is fed alone, it is in my opinion too concentrated. I raise two litters of pigs each year. They generally average from 275 to 300 pounds at seven months old."

Don't fail to read the advertisement of Hochschild Kohn & Co., Baltimore's Big Store which appears in the NEWS. This is a reliable store and has the confidence of the people of the city and State.

The P., W. & B. Railroad Company, in appreciation of the services rendered them by Robert Gregg, who by his presence of mind and prompt action in giving warning of the disaster at Principio, Friday of last week, thus averting a serious accident and loss of life, have promised the lad an easy and lucrative position with them, as soon as he has finished his education.

E G. Packard, near Dover, Delaware shipped a consignment of Keiffer pears to London, England, last Saturday. They carry all right in barrels and are selling there from $4.50 to $5 per barrel. The freight from Dover to New York is 45 cents and the freight from New York to London and all other charges, such as insurance, commission, market charges and storage amount to about $1, total of less than $1 50 from Dover to the London consumer. This shows a net price of $3 for 5 baskets.
