GETTING AWAY FROM HOME

The Spirit of Restlessness and the Desire For Change.

Judging by a good deal of the conversation of the present day, there are a large number of people who have a positive horror of home. This curious revulsion of feeling is taken by many persons as a sign of social deterioration. For our own part we find it difficult to take it quite seriously or to see in it anything more than a passing whim.

Nobody nowadays likes monotony. Change is what people desire—not perhaps any great change, but lots of small change; not necessarily for the better, but for its own sake. Now, there is a great sameness about one's own four walls, be they ever so handsome. We all feel at times an overpowering desire to look at something else. We cannot change the patterns or the pictures on them every day, and neither they nor the home furniture ever seems to alter in expression.

Again, there is a terrible sameness about one's own cook. Experience enables us to foretell the taste of everything at home, from the soup to the savory if we are rich and from the mutton to the cheese if we are poor; whereas if we dine at a restaurant everything down to the salt is different, and the restaurant is refurnished daily with new faces.

Then, again, the music and stir going on around one avoid the necessity for much conversation, and conversation in the home circle is sometimes difficult and sometimes dull. It does not do always just to say what one thinks, it is such bad practice for dining out, and, this being the case, it is not easy sometimes to think what to say.

Nowadays we get, socially speaking, tired of our friends and even of our acquaintances. We want them to pass continually before us like a street procession. Instead of that they rather resemble a stage crowd and keep coming up again. There is a limit to those we know, a limit even to those we should like or should be likely to know even by sight, and at a restaurant this latter limit is disregarded. The barrier of good manners which forbids that those who are acquainted with one another should speak is sufficient to protect our station or our dignity, but it is not a very high fence, and it is one which it is amusing to look over.—London Spectator.

SOME PUZZLERS.

How many teeth have you?

How high (in inches) is a silk hat?

Which way does the crescent moon turn, to the right or left?

How many toes has a cat on each fore foot? On each hind foot?

What color are your employer's eyes? The eyes of the man at the next desk?

In which direction is the face turned on a cent? On a quarter? On a dime?

How many steps lead from the street to the front door of your house or flat?

What are the exact words on a two cent stamp, and in which direction is the face on it turned?

Write down, offhand, the figures on the face of your watch. The odds are that you will make at least two mistakes in doing this.

What is the name, signed in facsimile, on any dollar, two dollar, five dollar or ten dollar bill you ever saw? You've read dozens of those names. Can you remember one?

Your watch has some words written or printed on its face. You have seen these words a thousand times. Write them out correctly. Few can do this. Also what is the number in the case of your watch?—Washington Times.

A Cynic's Analysis of Woman.

"Female lives are 10.6 per cent better risks than male lives," says the Chicago health department. "Why don't insurance agents take advantage of this fact?"

If a woman is willing to take out insurance there is a strong probability that she knows that her health is in danger.

If a man who knew that his health was in danger should apply for insurance his conscience would hurt him. A woman's conscience, however, is seldom as vigorous as her intuition. Her intuition is the proud guiding star of her existence. And when her intuition begins to operate in a field which is as unfamiliar to her as insurance its mandates are irresistible.

The conclusion seems to be, therefore, that in general the women who don't get insured are good risks and the women who do get insured are bad risks.—Chicago Tribune.

Joss Making In China.

Joss making is very simple. The manufacturer's chief stock in trade consists of wooden or metal molds. In these the wet clay is put into shape and allowed to dry. It is then touched up, dipped in molten glaze and allowed to cool. The average workman can turn out 100 a day. The clay is kaolin, running from red and gray to snow white, and costs about a cent per pound. The glaze is melted in a small charcoal furnace.

The wages of a good artist vary from 20 to 40 cents per day. The cost of a fair sized image is about 3 cents. He sells it for about 5 cents to a native and for as high as $5 to the credulous European or American tourist. The molding, touching and retouching are the same in all shops. The glazing varies indefinitely. It may be opaque, of any color; transparent, but tinted with any shade desired, or clear and colorless. The best work is made by painting the clay with heavy white paint and dipping in the glaze last described. In another kind of good work the clay is colored in caustic colors, kept in the heat until they have set and then glazed as usual. The Chinese are very skillful in this field of labor and with fine brushes will turn out josses that at first sight might be taken for cloisonne.

Shoes! Shoes! More Shoes!

The children must have more Shoes. That's the household cry in most families—where there are any children.

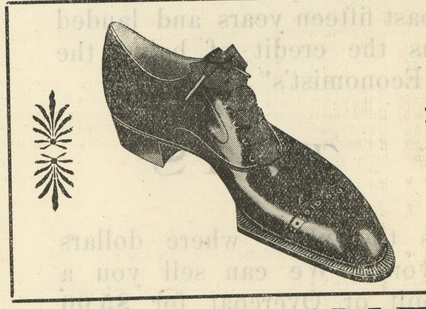

Why, it makes the parents flinch every time the children stub their toes, for they see their dollarsbeing kicked into little bits.

But Here's Relief

Bring the children here, let us shoe them with our strong, durable and good-looking Shoes—Shoes better than the ordinary kind, but costing no more.

Children's Shoes at 50c to $2.00—and guaranteed to be all we claim for them.
