ABE COHEN

SANDY BOTTOM.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

The Cecil Democrat last week advocated the keeping of a pair of bloodhounds in the Jail yard, so as to track criminals or escaped prisoners. The article was called forth by the cold-blooded murder of one of the most prominent citizens of the town and country on the outskirts of Elkton, while he was taking his usual daily walk. Detectives, and the whole bar of Elkton, have been working on the case since the perpetration of the crime. Two negroes have now been indicted for the murder, but their guilt is yet to be proved, and may not be. The Democrat says that had the Jail been supplied with a pair of bloodhounds, they could have been put upon the trail of the guilty within an hour and the culprits captured. Bloodhounds are unerring in their hunts, if given a quick start, and will not molest other people. They will follow the scent as a hound does a fox.

TYLDEN.

THIS Sir William was late of Great Tyldens, in the parish of Marden, from whom descended Marmaduke Tylden of Great Oak Manor, Kent county, Maryland, who settled there about the year 1658.

Sis John Tylden, of Milsted, England, in a lineage prepared from the family records, says: "In relation to the Tyldens, of Great Oak Manor, Kent county, Maryland, and the founder of that branch of the Tilden family, I have after mature investigation arrived at the conclusion that the head of that branch of the family was at one time principal priprietor of the large estate of Great Tyldens, near Marden, South Kent, England. as the large means which he possessed and the portion he transferred to America (see records of Kent, England, and Kent county, Md.) justify me in arriving at this conclusion.

"It appears to have been the custom of the Tyldens who are descended from Nathaniel Tylden to write their name Tilden. This," he continues, "is supposed to be owing to the mutations of the English language about the time of the planting of the American Colonies."

Burke says the family of Tyldens is of great antiquity and has been seated in the county of Kent, England, for centuries. Of the three branches into which it separated the eldest became possessed of Milsted, in that county, the second removed into Sussex, and one of its members, imigrating, founded the numerous Tildens, of America, while the youngest branch settled at Hull, England.

The Tyldens, of England, intermarried with the family of the first Norman Earl of Chester, with the Crews, of Montel, and others of high degree. The ancient seats of the Tyldens in England were in the parishes of Otterden, Brenchly, Kinnington and others.

Marmaduke Tylden, the Lord of Great Oak Manor, died in the year 1671, leaving three sons—Marmaduke, Charles and John Tylden·

Marmaduke succeeded to the estate of his father, and was at one time the largest landed proprietors in the province, his lands in Kent county alone aggregating 32,000 acres.

The great great grandson of Sir William Tylden, of Great Tyldens, in the parish of Marden, county of Kent, England, married Rebecca Wilmer, the daughter of Lambert Wilmer, and had children—Marmaduke, Charles, Wealthy Ann, Mary and Martha. Charles Tilden, son of the first Marmaduke, as his name appears on the Maryland records, was a judge of the Kent County Provincial Court in the year, 1685, at which time he took the oath as commissioner and justice of the peace. Charles Tilden was also a vestryman of St. Paul's parish in the year 1693. The important office of High Sheriff of Kent county was bestowed upon this colonial magnate in the year last named. The Tildens continued to be actively identified with the affairs of the church and State for many generations.

The alliances of this ancient family of old Kent, both in England and Maryland, were with the other Eastern Shore families of proud lineage, including Col. Thomas Hynson, Col. Thomas Ringgold, the Handys, Brice (Western Shore) Carvill, Buchanan and others not of the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

Goy. Samuel J. Tilden, of New York, was a descendent of Nathaniel Tylden, who left England in 1628 and settled at Scituate, Mass. While of the same ancient lineage as Marmaduke Tylden, of Great Oak Manor, in Kent county, Maryland, he is not of his immediate line in America.

While the name of the Lord of Great Oak Manor has practically died out in Maryland and the thousands of acres which once the veritable kingdom of this Colonial lord of the soil have been divided among many owners, his descendents in Maryland are legion, and all revere the name of Marmaduke Tylden and speak with pride of their descent from this founder of many representative families in the Colonial period, whose sons helped to mold the history of the Province and State and whose daughters became the wives of many distinguished officials and the mothers of many patriotic sons. Hence the blood of the pious Crusader, Sir Richard Tylden, still courses in the veins of those names, like that of the Tyldens, have always been honorable in Maryland.

Among them are Mrs. Thomas Hill, Mrs. Anna Bryant Sadtler, Mr. Malcolm Westcott Hill, Mr. Norman Alan Hill, Mrs. Frederick Tyson and Mr. Malcolm Van Vetchen Tyson.—Balto. Sun.

WHEN TO MARRY.

Marry when the year is new
Always loving, kind and true;
When February birds do mate,
You may wed, nor dread your fate;
If you wed when March winds blow,
Joy and sorrow both you'll know;
Marry in April when you can,
Joy for maiden and for man;
Marry in the month of May,
You will surely rue the day;
Marry when June roses blow,
Over land and sea you'll go;
They who in July do wed
Must labor always for their bread.
Whoever wed in August be,
Many changes are sure to see;
Marry in September's shine,
Your living will be rich and fine;
If in October you do marry,
Love will come but riches tarry;
If you wed in bleak November,
Only joy will come, remember;
When December's snows fall fast.
Marry and true love will last.

RACE EXTREMES.

While Beacon Hill, Boston, is protesting against the intrusion of a family of color in one of its best appointed apartment houses, Chicago young women are receiving colored men on terms of equality and acting as their servitors at social functions. Truely, this is a curious country. If some one would take the trouble to collate the freak views upon the race question North. South, East and West, it would furnish one of the most contradictory collections of human opinion that ever was gotten together. The safe way in all cases of overdifference is the way that does not court attention by its extreme nature. The South recognizes the good in the colored race infinitely more than do the maudlin sentimentalists who know that race only through the spectacles of sectional animus or by exceptional instances of colored men of the highest type of character and culture.

A large ecclesiastical gathering, representing one of the leading denominations in this country, recently held, had a negro as a vice-presiding officer, a fact that shocked the sensibilities of some, while it won the applause of others. It must remain for a long time as a matter of opinion as to the degree of recognition to be accorded the brother in black, but social equality is the last extreme, and for it there is no justification at present whatever may be the case centuries from now. In the meanwhile the colored man, upright and self-respecting, wins from all right-thinking persons as much respect as would be accorded his white brother.

IN HER HOME TOWN.

Interesting Stories of Mrs. Chadwick's Career as a Girl.

Mrs. Mary Ann Bigley, mother of the one-time Elizabeth Bigley, now Mrs. Chadwick, arrived in this city Monday after an extended stay in Cleveland.

The members of the family here feel keenly the exposure that has followed Mrs. Chadwick's prosecution, but from what can be learned they have not in late years had a great deal to do with the wayward woman. The family was kept poor contributing to Madame DeVere's defence when she was prosecuted for fogery in Toledo, and there are no evidences that the prodigious financial operations of Mrs. Chadwick profited them any.

One son, Daniel Bigley, now a successful implement dealer in Cleveland, probably has kindly feeling towards his sister, for some time after she, as Madame de Veve, was liberated on parole from the Ohio State Prison, he left the old homestead at Eastwood, near this city, and went to Cleveland, where he was set up in business, it is said by his sister. He prospered, and is now reputed to be worth about $100,000.

Woodstock residents who knew the girl well find it hard to believe that Mrs. Chadwick was Madame de Vere, although it is conceded that her native cleverness would carry her a long way. Betsy Bigley was not an attractive-looking woman in later life. She had keen business sense, but her personal appearance was not such as to attract men. From her early girlhood she appears to have been actuated by an inordinate desire to acquire wealth.

An early recollection of John Pascoe, a prominent busines man of this city, is that once, when she was walking into Woodstock from her home, he overtook her driving. The two drove into town together, and during the drive the business man was regaled by a story to the effect that his fair passenger had recently fallen heir to $100,000. The next morning she went into his store and asked for a loan of $5, which she didn't get.

Other attempts to defraud Woodstock business men were more successful.

She was finally arrested in Branford, disguised as a man, and was prosecuted here for forging a note on which she purchased an expensive piano. A series of frauds of this sort resulted in her disappearance from Woodstock. Then came her Toledo experience.

It is recalled that, as a girl, while she was not particularly brilliant at ordinary studies, she excelled at the school entertainments, and was a frequent contributor to the school programmes. Her imitative powers were remarkable, and she had a voice of wonderful expressiveness. She was capable of giving clever impersonations of many varied characters. As a young woman she was fine looking, tall and well featured, with keen dark eyes and a commanding, impressive bearing — characteristics that have apparently done much in assisting her in her varied roles since she left her village home in Oxford county.

Mrs. Chadwick was of English parentage, and in the early days she had a decided Cockney dialect. — Woodstock (Ont.) Cor. New York World.

Try for Health

222 South Peoria St.,
CHICAGO, ILL., Oct. 7, 1902.

Eight months ago I was so ill that I was compelled to lie or sit down nearly all the time. My stomach was so weak and upset that I could keep nothing on it and I vomited frequently. I could not urinate without great pain and I coughed so much that my throat and lungs were raw and sore. The doctors pronounced it Bright's disease and others said it was consumption. It mattered little to me what they called it and I had no desire to live. A sister visited me from St. Louis and asked me if I had ever tried Wine of Cardui. I told her I had not and she bought a bottle. I believe that it saved my life. I believe many women could save much suffering if they but knew of its value.

Georgia Dunbar

Don't you want freedom from pain? Take Wine of Cardui and make one supreme effort to be well. You do not need to be a weak, helpless sufferer. You can have a woman's health and do a woman's work in life. Why not secure a bottle of Wine of Cardui from your druggist today?
