PLAIN TALKS WITH OUR FARMERS!

[Written expressly for the NEWS.]

"One hundred bushels of corn to the acre" is the war cry of the "Corn Special" party which left Baltimore for a two days' tour by way of the Maryland and Pennsylvania Railroad. The object of the "Corn Special" is to teach the farmers how to increase their yield of corn by practical and easily applied methods, involving no extra expense.

The special train which left Baltimore made its first stop at Towson, where a group of farmers was waiting for it. The audience filled the lecture coach of the train, and that the farmers were there to listen and learn was evident from the careful attention they gave to the lecturer, Prof. A. D. Shamel, the corn-breeding expert of the United States Department of Agriculture. In fact one of the farmers present said he had driven 22 miles to attend the lecture.

At Belair several meetings were held, both coaches being utilized and filled with farmers. These several meetings lasted two hours. After Professor Shamel had completed his lecture his remarks were supplemented by Prof. H. J. Patterson, director of the Maryland Agricultural College, and Prof. W. T. L. Taliaferro, the corn-breeding expert of the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Thousands of dollars and many years of hard work have been spent at the various agricultural experiment stations, and the result of this outlay of money and time is placed before the farmers by the "corn special." It is the method of selecting the seed that is explained by the lecturers with the "corn special." This method is as follows:

The average yield of corn per acre in Maryland is 32½ bushels, whereas if every stalk bore one good ear the yield would be 100 bushels, and there is no good reason why this maximum result should not be obtained. The principal cause of the small yield is lack of vitality in the seed. Many seeds do not germinate and many others that germinate grow weakly and slowly. The first principle of successful corn-breeding, then, is to properly select the seed.

To do this on a scientific basis, but which, however, is so simple that a boy can apply it, is to select twice as many ears as will be needed for seed, the rate being about 12 ears to the acre. Lay these ears out on the floor of the barn in rows, driving long nails in the floor to hold them in place. Then take a box about six inches deep and 2 feet square and fill it half full of wet sawdust or sand. Lay on top of the bed of sawdust a piece of stout muslin, which has been marked off into squares with a led pencil and the squares numbered.

Now from each ear of corn pick about six grains, from different parts of the ear, and, having numbered the ears, place the grains on the muslin within the square the number of which corresponds to the number of the ear from which the grains were taken. Thus the six grains from No. 1 ear go in square No. 1 and so on. A top cover of muslin is then laid on carefully and the whole covered with burlap and a layer of 2 inches of wet sawdust or sand. The experimental box is then placed in a moderately warm place—a living room will do.

At the end of a week lift off the top layers of sawdust, burlay and muslin, exposing the grains, and note which have sprouted strongly and which have failed to sprout or have sprouted weakly. You are now able to tell which ears of corn contain strong, healthy grains, and these alone should be used for seed. The others should be rejected.

Another important reason of poor yield is the lack of regularity in planting, due to using one-sized hole in the ring of the planter for both large and small grains. Naturally more small grains will fall through the hole than large ones. To obviate this divide the seed ears into three lots of large grain, medium grain and small grain. Shell them into separate sacks and hang them up in an airy place to dry thoroughly. Then have the holes in the planter ring to correspond with the size of the grains by using different sized plates. For the largest grains it may be necessary to file out the hole."

SALE OF FINE ESTATE.

Agreements have been signed whereby Messrs. H. Clay and Edward Lusby sell to Mr. J. Walter Skirven their elegant farm near Chestertown. This farm contains 300 acres of as fine land as can be found in Kent county, and under Mr. Skirven's expert direction will be brought to even a higher state of cultivation. The price agreed upon was $18,500, the purchaser to be landlord from last January. R. D. Hynson, Esq., represents the Messrs. Lusby.

Mr. Joel R. Clements has sold to Mr. Randolph Anthony his excellent truck "farm" on Chester river for $1500. Mr. Wm. H. Kirby is the present tenant.

The Pennsylvania R. R. Co. have purchased a half acre of land from Mrs. S. M. Usilton near the old depot and will put in a "Y" and discard the old turn table.

POOR CANNING OUTLOOK.

Canning and Mercantile Company at Still Pond Give Notice of Big Closing Out Sale—The Canning Business In Kent.

It is regretted that the Canning & Mercantile Co., of Still Pond, find it necessary to advertise a closing-out sale and to withdraw from this community. Their employees have won a popular place in the hearts of the people and it is hoped they will find occupations that will keep them in Kent.

The canneries at Rosedale and Still Pond Station will be run this year contracts having been made for tomatoes at $6 per ton.

The Pierson Packing Co, Numsen & Co., and several other firms in Baltimore have contracted with Kent farmers to grow tomatoes at $6 per ton.

From present indications there will be but few canneries in operation in Kent during the coming season on account of the very low price of canned goods.

Packers, with practically no exception are insisting upon $6 a ton, alleging that in the present state of the canned goods market they cannot afford to pay more. On the other hand, the growers contend that to grow tomatoes at the price named would mean a loss on every ton grown.

"A failure to operate the dozen or more canning houses in Kent county would mean the cutting off of thousands of dollars annualy put in circulation by packers in the form of wages among a small army of operatives," said a Kent county grower. "But that army," he continued, "would not include the farmers, the ones upon whom falls all the risk and much of the work in producing a tomato crop. Every ton of the fruit grown at $6 a ton means a loss to the producer. Every farmer will vouch for the truth of that proposition. On the other hand, it is equally true that an active canning season puts more than $100,000 in circulation among the thousands of operatives, many of whom are residents of the country.

"Our merchants reap a harvest during the summer from these people. Their increased receipts from the operatives, however, can hardly do more than to counteract the losses to the farmers, who are after all, the mainstay of every other enterprise in the rural sections.

"Tomato growers have learned to their sorrow that their is such a thing as being tomato-poor, or, in other words, the more tomatoes the farmer produces at a loss the greater will be the shortage in his accounts at the end of the year."

Many farmers are preparing to plant small patches, to be shipped to the city markets, in the event of a failure to open the factories in the rural sections. By following this plan the growers have several times struck it rich. About five years ago as high as $30 a ton was received for tomatoes in the city.

Packers claim that the tomato pack now in storage is fully 50 per cent, of last year's crop, and that they cannot afford to pay the $7 and $8 prices of a few years ago.

Property Sales.—J. Waters Russell, real estate broker, has sold to Mr. Charles S. Smith the Rivers home on Washington Avenue for $2050. This property is occupied by Dr. G. A. Jarman and family.

Mr. Charles A. Mc Whorter has purchased the goodwill and fixtures of the Chestertown Laundry from Mr. William Green and will take charge at once. Mr. Green will continue to look after the outside business, but because of poor health felt compelled to give up the work in the Laundry. The Chestertown Laundry has built up a large trade by quick and efficient work and we predict for the new manager equal success. Arrangements have been made to continue the laundry at the same location.

BILL RILEY, the well-known Worton colored politician, died this week.

TOM WARD, a well known colored citizen of Chestertown, was arrested Wednesday shortly after midnight by officer Getchall charged with removing planks from Jefferson's new building.

THE Pine Tree Hunt Club met at the Voshell House Wednesday night and partook of one of "Aunt Tempie's" elegant suppers. It was a grand and delightful occasion. The committee was composed of Messrs. Sterling Evans, John C. Smith, Fletcher Sparks and Cooper Tarbutton. About one hundred were present.

ONE of the most attractive lots in Chester Cemetery is the George H. Snitcher lot which has just been fitted up by Davidson, the Chestertown tomb stone dealer. This lot is surrounded by an elaborate granite curbing and the stones that mark the graves are of handsome Quincy granite.
