The Sad Reaper.

A TRIBUTE TO THE MEMORY OF ARCHER KERR HEPBRON.

There are those who would like to see more than the passing notice which you gave in your last issue of the unfortunate drowning of this young man.

"Death loves a shining mark," that mark was found in Kerr Hepbron. With a figure to be proud of a good countenance set off by a pair of bright beaming eyes, bespeaking intelligence, and a quiet, unobtrusive manner he was one to attract attention wherever he went. His presence inspired confidence. There is that in the young, strong bouyant life which is always attractive. But when we add to this, nobleness of character, fixedness of purpose, and sweetness of disposition; you make the young man all the more attractive, Kerr had all this to a pre-eminent degree. His home life was beautiful, he was a dutiful, obedient, thoughtful son, and an affectionate brother and one upon whom the whole family doted, and from whom they expected great things to come. He was not unmindful of his father's business, early in life he had consecrated himself to God's service and took a manly earnest stand in the church. His walk in life was blameless. He had just completed his first year in the law department in the University of Maryland and would doubtless have made himself distinguished in the profession of his choice, since he posessed that quality of mind which fitted him for the law. Both of his grandfathers, the late Lewis S. Hepbron, of Still Pond, and the late Rev. J. B. Merritt were men of sterling worth and well-known in their day. Coming from a long line of worthy ancestors on both sides, he inherited those qualities which would have enabled him to take a high position among his fellowmen. He was born in Kent county, Del., but the major part of his short life had been spent in Maryland. He loved his state and took the deepest interest in her welfare.

Though but a little over twenty years of age, he was wonderfully matured and those who were his seniors sought his advice. The path of life before him was a bright and promising one. It was little thought when he joined his companions on the 24th of July for a day of pleasure that he was going to his end But so it was. It is the unexpected that always happens. While in bathing, not knowing the treacherous waters and being unable to swim, he lost his life. To his aged grandmother and devoted parents he was the chief attraction of life—the pride and joy of their hearts. His sudden taking away leaves a gaping wound that can never be healed. Their main hope now in life is to so live that they may meet him on the morn of the joyful resurrection. S. S. H.

REV. C. K. MORRIS.

As announced in the NEWS last week, Rev. C. K. Morris died at his home in Centreville, Wednesday, August 9, of bilious dysenterv, after being confined to his bed less than a week, aged about seventy-three years. Mr. Morris was actively engaged in the ministry for over thirty-eight years. For a number of years he has been in failing health, and at the last session of the Wilmington Conference, held in March, he retired from active work and removed to Centreville, where he has since resided.

Before entering the ministry Rev. Mr. Morris was a public school teacher. He was an earnest, forcible speaker, and his logical, clearly presented arguments never failed to carry conviction to the minds of his hearars. His life was one of quiet, zealous endeavor to advance Christianity and make it a vital, living thing to the people who came within his influence. At time he was retired last conference Presiding Elder Koons paid him a very beautiful tribute and said he was no ordinary man. He was licensed to preach on February 27th, 1867, and his first appointment was as junior on the Hillsboro circuit with Rev. J. W. Hammersley as pastor in charge. Mr. Morris was ordained deacon in 1888 by Bishop Foss, since which time he has baptised over 800 children, married 115 couples and preached over 5,000 sermons. Rev. Mr. Morris was in the mission work twenty years and besides Hillsboro served the following circuits: Galena, Millington, Townsend, Silverbrook, Westover, Wye and Starr, Piney Neck and Golt's. The deceased was a native of Kent county and was twice married. His first wife was Miss Sarah C. Lusby, daughter of the late William Lusby, of Queen Anne's county, One daughter, Mrs. George Wyatt, of Townsend, Del., survives him as a result of this union, His second wife was Miss Martha Higgins, of Kent county, who survives him with four children: Mrs. Harry Covell, of Wye Mills, Mr. Wm. H. Morris, of Baltimore, Miss Dora S. and Mr. H. Scott Morris, of Centreville. Funeral services were held at his late residence Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, Rev. H. G. Budd officiating.

PHYSICIANS recommend "Pepsimint," the new granular, effervescent remedy for Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, and Mental Exhaustion. Guaranteed harmless. Pleasant to take. 10 pua 25
