FATTENING STEERS.

Points of Value in Feeding Corn and Clover Hay.

H. W. Mumford of the Illinois experiment station has recently announced a number of conclusions from a test with ten lots of steers to determine the most profitable way of feeding corn and clover hay to cattle. They are as follows:

Silage ranks with ear corn, cornmeal and corn and cob meal in its ability to make rapid gains on fattening cattle.

Cornmeal and corn and cob meal seem to be about equally efficient in producing quick finish.

In this test more rapid gains were secured with whole than with shelled corn and equally as good as with meal.

A reasonably quick finish may be secured without the feeding of an excessively heavy grain ration. In this test the largest average amount of concentrates fed daily throughout the experiment was in lots 2, 6, 7 and 8, in all of which the cob is included. The daily ration of concentrates in these lots varied from 23 to 23.5 pounds or approximately one peck of ear corn and three pounds of gluten meal or oil meal per 1,000 pounds live weight of cattle.

The feeding of a nitrogenous concentrate to supplement corn undoubtedly stimulates the appetite and increases the capacity of the steer for consuming to advantage large quantities of concentrates. Hence this system of feeding is to be recommended where a quick finish is desired.

Where conditions are such as prevailed in this experiment corn and cob meal is not to valuable for fattening steers, pound for pound, as cornmeal. The presence of the cob in ground corn does not appear to materially increase the efficiency of corn for beef production or for combined beef and pork production under conditions prevailing in this test.

A given amount of corn and cob meal did not produce any more beef and considerably less beef and pork combined than did ear corn.

Cornmeal proved much more efficient for beef production than shelled corn, while for combined beef and pork production they appear to be about equally efficient. Cornmeal is not more efficient for beef production than is ear corn.

Ear corn is much more efficient for beef production than is shelled corn.

This test indicated that the supplementing of corn with nitrogenous concentrates used in this instance increases the efficiency of corn and clover hay for beef production.

One Dozen Good Reasons.

1st. Cigarettes or tobacco in any form hinders the growth and injures the nerves and health.

2nd. Cigarettes foster the tobacco habit, and may make any boy a slave to it.

3rd. The cigarette habit does not help a boy in his life work and may prevent him from obtaining a good position in business.

4th. Most all reliable business establishments refuse to employ boys who smoke cigarettes.

5th. The following are among the poisons and drugs used in the manufacture of cigarettes: arsenic, creosote, nicotine, opium, saltpetre, tonca flavoring and rum, all of which are harmful.

6th. Cigarette smoking makes a boy dull and stupid, impairs his memory and prevents his advance at school.

7th. Smoking creates an unnatural thirst, which may lead to drinking intoxicating liquors.

8th. Smoking is a selfish habit which may cause annoyance, discomfort, and distress to others.

9th. Tobacco affects the eye, ear, and nose; or sight, hearing and smelling, also the heart.

10th. It costs more than most boys can afford to pay to have their nerves and health ruined.

11th. Smoking is a useless and expensive habit and always does harm in a greater or less degree.

12th. It is also a filthy habit and defiles the body, and anything that defiles or injures the body is a sin against God, who creates man in his own image.
