WHY MEN SLEEP IN SOME CHURCHES

Several hundred people gathered in the First M. P. Church, at 7th and Walnut Sts., Wilmington last Sunday, to hear the Rev. George L. Wolfe, the pastor, deliver a sermon on "Sleeping in Church," and it was based on Acts 20,9.

"And there sat in the window a certain young man, named Eutychus, being falling into a deep sleep, and as Paul was long preaching, he sunk down with sleep, and fell down from the third loft and was taken up dead." The preacher said in part:

"What a remonstrance against a long sermon! Paul did not consider the warning, for, as soon as the young man was restored, he preached until the break of dawn lit up the eastern sky. If any tedious preacher attempts to follow Paul's example, it is only necessary to remind him that he is not a great apostle.

"Paul was such an interesting preacher that the hours flew unobserved. He was born in our famous university town of Tarsus; versed in Stoic philosphy, as his sermons amply show; learned besides in the wisdom of the Jewish schools; he associated with men like Apollos, skilled rhetoricians; he sought aid of all the culture of the day, and thus his audience was carried away by his solid thought, irresistible logic, attractive style, novelty, eloquence, and overpowering earnestness.

"Drowsiness in the pulpit will not be tolerated in the pew. We want more clear, ringing Anglo-Saxon in the pulpit and less artificiality of language and voice in our sermons.

"Dismal wailing with weak metaphor and redundancy of speech, may claim to be the offspring of culture; but culture does not recognize the wayward child. The gestures may be awkward; but let the manner be earnest, and the hearers will not be apt to go to sleep.

"It was with no uncertain sound that the great Apostle Paul preached the magnificient discourse on Mars Hill, or declared the whole counsel of God all the way Jerusalem to Rome. Simplicity and pungency are the essential elements in preaching the gospel, for, without these every effort in the pulpit will fall. A countless multitude of intelligent, warm-hearted men and women seldom enter the church, except to attend a funeral or a wedding. Why so? They tell us of the dullness, the sameness, the inconsequence, the length of the sermon. A preacher of any but the highest powers who detains his hearers beyond half an hour is regarded as a social criminal, for the prospect of a hour's sermon would keep even most of 'the regulars' away.

"Short service and shorter sermons are demanded by the taste of the day. When Edward Irving published four discourses under the title of 'Ovations,' he gave as the reason that the very word 'sermon' was indicative of dullness.

"A sermon should be a thing of life and beauty, in which should be: 'Thoughts that breathe and words that burn.' A sermon, like a pudding, must have something in it.

"Dullness and drowsiness in tho pew are largely due to weakness in power of statement in the pulpit. Instead of droning and whining, and moaning and funeralizing religious, we need to freshen up and get out of the old ruts, and instead of going through our sermons cool, collected and composed, we need to surround our pulpits with heaven's fire—the old-time power that will bring a revival rather than the millenium.

"We ministers need not talk about sinners in the mass and pass by the individnal sinners who fill our pews and pay over salaries. We will hereafter talk about the living Pharisees, and not the Pharisees of Judea, who have been dust and ashes for nineteen hundred years. The woman broke the looking glass because it showed wrinkles in her face, and many a preacher has been scorned because he has told his people of their sins. We must declare the whole counsel of God, for in the judgment day we shall have to account for our stewardship. Let us pray for a great awakening in both the pulpit and the pew. We cannot afford to 'smooth down the stubborn text to ears polite and snugly keep damnation out of sight.' Let us wake up. Half of our church members are asleep.

"Christians stand discussing the questions: Shall we dance? Shall we play cards? Shall we go to the theatre? Can we go to the opera? Let conscience, and the rules of your church decide those questions. Look to the five hundred millions of the race marching on to the judgment without any warning. 'O, my brothers and sisters in Jesus, it seems to me the time has come for something almost desperate. Let us drop everything and run to the rescue of immortal sou's! Let us rise from our couches of ease, and rush into the battle for 'Christ and the church.'"

COFFEE FOR SICK LAMBS.

Farmer Finds It To Be An Antidote For Laurel Poisoning.

SALLADATBURG, PA., Ma, May 13.—William Gohl, of Rural Route No. 1, which runs out of this place, has made a discovery which should be widely heralded, as it is said to be a great benefit to sheep raisers.

He has had many years' experience in the business and has lost many lambs that ate laurel. He has tried every known so-called remedy unsuccessfully, and has lost as many as six lambs in a day from this cause.

He read somewhere that coffee was poison to sheep, and he reasoned that, if "like cures like," the next lamb he found ill from laurel poisoning would be treated with coffee. The first sick lamb was given a half cup of cold, black coffee, and it was only a short time till the kid was the liveliest of the flock.

Since his discovery, Gohl has not lost a single lamb from this cause, although some have been nearly dead when found, and he has successfully applied the simple remedy in every case.

Leprosy in School Blamed on Rats in Girls' Hair.

School authorities of Zanesville, Ohio, are endeavoring to suppress the fact that two high school girls are suffering with a disease that has been diagnosed as leprosy. Mary Tuller and Jeannette S. Endless, daughters of well-known citizens, are in close quarantine. The disease is in its incipient stage. Superintendent W. L. Cowers admits the cases are peculiar and that one girl has been sent away for treatment, but will not say to what institution. The leprosy is said to have been contracted by the wearing of "rats" in the hair.
