FOR THE VACATION TRIP

New Blouses, Foulards, Tub Frocks, The Narrow Skirt, The Fichu, Young Styles.

Every woman who is going on any kind of a vacation trip or even on a visit to relatives or friends in the country during this month or next begins about now to plan just what she will take with her and try to decide what few things she needs yet to buy to supplement her wardrobe. No matter how many shirt waists she already possesses she invariably needs at least one more. And if all her blouses are white she should invest in one of the new models that shows a fascinating touch of color. A charming example is of lavender and white striped batiste with a white pleated frill with a wide hem of the lavender.

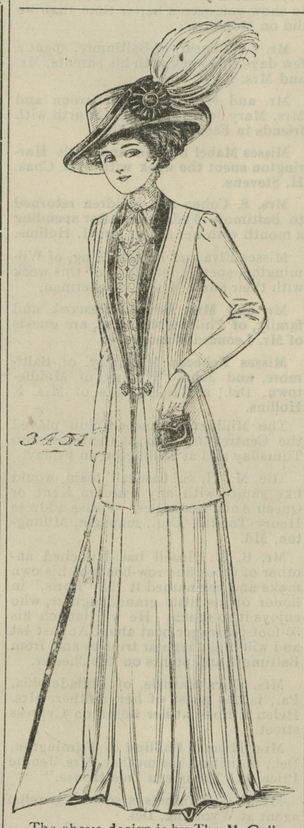

A FOULARD FROCK.

She probably has several simple tub-frocks and a linen coat and skirt costume in white or ecru or the fashionable lavender shade. In any place that is at all gay she will need also a foulard. A charming nattier blue and white model was made with a straight tunic to the knees edged with a wide band of plain blue messaline falling over a pleated skirt. The bodice has a deep transparent yoke of dotted net above a tucked vest effect of the messaline. The side fronts were pleated on the shoulders and brought down rather full to the wide girdle of messaline.

A LONG COAT.

If she does not already possess one she will find absolutely essential a long loose coat of some sort. These garments are oftenest made of pongee or natural colored linen. They can be used for motoring, driving, traveling or as an all around utility wrap. A smart coat of pongee is made with a semi-fitted back and a deep shawl collar and turn back cuffs of gay Persian silk.

The linen coats are cut almost the same but they are usually perfectly plain. If a warmer wrap is wanted the coat can be of mohair or serge or smart checked woolen.

The above design is by The McCall Company, New York, Designers and Makers of McCall Patterns.

THE NEW FRENCH SKIRT.

We hear a great deal about the new French skirt that is so tight around the bottom that one can scarcely walk but few sensible women are including this among their new vacation frocks for the reason that it is supremely unbecoming. Some of the fashion designers have improved on the original model and have just brought out a skirt that is tightly pleated into smooth fitting lines around the hips and gathered into a wide foot band of black satin just above the bend of the knee and with sufficient fullness at the bottom to be graceful.

THE FICHU IN AGAIN.

The old fashioned fichu is the very latest thing brought out by Dame Fashion. A charming frock of pale pink mull has the round neck finished by a most delightful fichu of the material trimmed with tiny plaitings. This is knotted gracefully on the chest and the ends hang below the belt. A simple girlish evening frock of white point d'Esprit has the low corsage completed by a softly draped fichu trimmed with lace ruffles.

SEASON OF YOUTHFUL MODES.

This is decidedly a season of youthful modes. The short skirts which have invaded all departments of dress have much to do with this youthful air and so have the trim belts and jaunty coats. As a well-known society man said recently, "At a distance all our fashionable women are not more than eighteen."

A very chic short frock lately seen was of checked gingham in quarter inch checks of black and white. It has a gored skirt with pleats let in toward the bottom and a simple blouse but what gave it character were the wide turn-down cuffs and collar of coral pink linen edged with tiny scallops buttonholed in black. A line of black dots was embroidered just inside the scallops and a soft tie of black satin and a patent leather belt gave the finishing touches.
