Ill With Lock-Jaw.—Mr. Arthur L. Harris, a progressive and popular young farmer, son of Hon. James S. Harris, was taken to the University Hospital, Baltimore, last Friday, suffering with a well-developed case of tetanus or lock-jaw. While handling peach crates during the early part of the week he stuck a nail into his hand. Considering the wound only a trivial one he gave but little attention to it, until inflamation and fever resulted. Dr. W. S. Maxwell was called in and finding that his patient's condition was quite serious quickly hurried with him to the Baltimore hospital. All that science and the best of medical skill can do is being done and the many friends of Mr. Harris and his family hope for his speedy recovery.

Fell Through.—Mrs. J. Cordray Loud met with a singular accident Tuesday while about her household duties. She was reaching up for some clothes on the roof of a back house building in which there was a skylight and broke through!
