NEGRO BOY KILLED.

Frederick L. Cotton, aged about 12 years, was killed instantly Wednesday while gunning in Robert Joiner's branch, near Melitota, by Dan Griffith, aged 11 years. Martie Reed, another boy, was present. The boys were playing with a gun, when Griffith pointed the weapon at Cotton said, "Look out!" when the trigger was accidentally struck and the gun discharged.

The boys were so scared that they told no one, and the body was not found until 3 A. M. Thursday. Justice Crawford held an inquest and the jury rendered a verdict of accidental death.

The boy was arrested yesterday upon further evidence being found by State's Attorney Beck.

LATHAM FLIES OVER BALTIMORE

Soars Like a Bird Down the River—Poises in Air So That a Sick Man May See Him—Drops a Card for Which He Is Paid $500, Etc.

A telegram from Baltimore on Monday says: "This morning Hurbert Latham was probably the only aviator in Baltimore, if not in the United States, who believed that he would accomplish a flight of nearly 25 miles, about half of it over the city.

Predictions that he would be killed, that he would fail in the attempt and that he would not even make the venture were abundant. Tonight Latham is hailed on all sides as a hero who has accomplished the impossible and, establishing a new record for over-city flight, has disclosed new possibilities in aviation.

The incentive for the flight was a prize of $5,000 offered by the Sun and The Evening Sun for a trip over a prescribed route from and returning to the aviation field, where Baltimore's aviation meet is now in progress. Latham was to follow the course of the Patapsco river from near the aviation field to Fort McHenry, whose banner furnished Francis Scott Key the inspiration for his famous poem, thence up the inner harbor to and around The Sun Building, thence east to the city limits, a mile north, and thence west to Druid Hill park, down Charles street to Baltimore street and thence again west and later southwest to the aviation field.

There was to be a short detour for the benefit of Ross Winans, a wealthy invalid, who, unable to leave his home, offered an additional $500 if Latham would come within his range of vision.

His Evolutions Recounted.

All this Latham accomplished, and into the program he injected some wonderful evolution. He varied his altitude from 400 to 2,000 feet and had to contend wind blowing at from 7 to 15 miles an hour. He used his 50-horsepower Antionette and was in the air 42 minutes, making no stop after leaving the field until he returned thereto. It is estimated that the flight, which is understood to establish a record for over-city flying, was witnessed by half a million people.

Every point of vantage about the city was occupied. All the tall buildings in the downtown section were availed of by thousands who sought viewpoints to witness the flight of the air-man and by noon every roof-top was black with people. Even low buildings had hundreds of spectators, and many more thousands, unable to get roof-top places, crowded into the downtown thoroughfares or sought the parks and open spaces.

City Stopped Work.

At 12 o'clock the whole city seemed to stop work and begin watching, and the excitement was added to by the terrific hub-bub which steam whistles set up. Some minutes later word came from Halethorpe that the air-man was ready, and then in a moment or two the City Hall bell began signaling that Latham had actually started.

In a few moments more those on the tall buildings saw a faint speck in the general direction of Halethorpe. This soon grew and grew, until it wae easily distinguished. It was Latham's great Antoinette floating eastward.

At Fort McHenry.

Borne by a stirring breeze, which aided him greatly, Latham flew straight and true for Fort McHenry, and when he was almost directly over the historic spot he slowly curved around and, heading in a generally northwestern direction, steered for the crowded "grandstands" in the skyscraper district. Arriving over Baltimore street, in neighborhood of Calvert street, he made another turn and in a second or two was off for Patterson Park.

To Patterson Park.

His trip to Patterson Park was a brief one, and soon he was again headed northwest and bound for Druid Hill Park. Here again he met with headwinds, and just circling the edge of the latter park, he turned again toward Charles street. Curving around the Belvedere Hotel he flew to about the line of Calvert street, and there, some 2,000 feet in the air, performed a series of aerial gyrations, wheeling back and forth for the edification of Mr. Ross Winans, who had offered $500 for the sight of one of the greatest modern wonders, the aeroplane in action.

Possibly four minutes covered the time that Latham spent near the Winans home, and then he struck off for the skyscraper district again. He came over The Sun

Horse in Pool.—One of Mr. Edw. Robinson's wagon horses was taken sick Monday while on the causeway leading to his home, near town. He wildly ran into the marsh and fell headlong into the old unused pool near Mr. Robinson's home. Here he waded around in the cold water up to his chest and was finally pulled out by block and falls. At last reports the animal was doing well.

Foot Ball To-Day.—On the Washington College field to-day the strong Rutgers College football warriors will struggle with the home eleven. They anticipate a month's work there, after which they will go to the First district. The County Commissioners sitting as a Board of Control and Review, have been at work revising and passing upon the assessment. Mr. Chas. W. Kibler was unanimously elected clerk.

Signal at Pool's Island.—The lighthouse officials announce the establishment of an additional red sector in Pool's Island light station. Upper Chesapeake Bay, as an additional aid to mariners navigating that part of the bay. The red sector will show between seventy-two degrees true east northeast, seventy-eighth east, and ninety-three degrees true east three-quarters south, the southerly edge to pass clear to the northward of Miller's Island Shoal buoy No. 1 and the northerly edge to cut Robins Point shoal buoy No. 3.
