FARMING EDUCATION

During the past week the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad conducted a campaign of agricultural education for the benefit of farming communities adjacent to its lines in Maryland, and the management is gratified at the interest the farmers have shown by their attendance at the meetings. A special train was run through the co-operation of Dr. Richard S. Hill, director of the department of Farmers' Institutes, stops being made at the principal stations along the railroad. The train was run three days, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, closing with an all-day meeting in Frederick on Saturday at which Governor Crothers delivered an address. It is estimated that about 1,000 people attended the lectures each day. The train consisted of four coaches and an experiment car from the Maryland Agricultural College.

Dr. Hill spoke on alfalfa raising. He was assisted by W. Oscar Collier, of Talbot county, whose subject was "Corn Cultivation"; E. I. Oswald, of Washington county, "Poultry Husbandry," and Charles S. Phelps, of Connecticut, "Dairy Farming."

Dr. Hill called attention to the profit of alfalfa from his own experience covering six years of its cultivation. Alfalfa yields from four to six crops a season, an average of about five tons to the acre. The market price of alfalfa averages about $20 a ton, which means that each acre will turn at least $400 a year. Alfalfa makes excellent pasture for both dairy and beef cattle and hogs and Dr. Hill's experience has been that animals pastured on it fatten more readily than others. Crab grass and weeds play havoc in an alfalfa crop, retarding its growth, and he advised the farmers to work the crop immediately after the second cutting, usually about the middle of July. The first crop of alfalfa is ready to mow early in June. Alfalfa will not grow during the winter months. Dr. Hill told the farmers to sow a field of alfalfa close to the house so the farm poultry can pick in it, which increases the number of eggs.

Mr. Collier, whose home is at Easton, is one of the most extensive corn raisers in Maryland and he stated to his audiences that experience had demonstrated that the largest crops were to be obtained by selecting seed from ears of medium-sized cob, with a slight protusion of the cob at the tip. This character of ear, he said, will permit of greater development and increased yield. He recommended in this connection to use germinating test box, which largely overcomes the necessity for replanting parts of fields or thinning out plants by careless labor. The lecturer said that he considers 100 bushels of shelled corn per acre a standard yield, and though this may seem high, he believes it can be attained on Maryland farms by systematically following scientific methods. The method recommended in producing a large corn crop was to lay a foundation, seven or eight months prior to planting, by preparing the soil. This can best be done by breaking the wheat stubble in Suly and sowing scarlet clover. The clover may be used for grazing purposes early in the spring and should be plowed under when the crimson tips are first noticed. Crimson clover is one of the greatest renovators of the soil known to the science of agriculture, forming a blanket to the soil when most needed. A small quantity of lime should be used when plowing the clover under, and for manurial purposes alone it is worth about $20 ao acre. Commercial fertilizers the speaker has found by experimentation to be a failure in corn raising. He also called attention to the use of clover for pasturing stock.

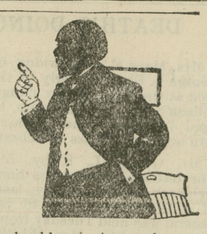

Mr. Phelps' lectures on dairy husbandry aroused keen interest in the subject. He spoke on the selection of the herd, recommending Jersey and Guernsey cattle for butter purposes, and Holsteins and Ayshires for generous milk supply. Crossing the strains the speaker's experience had proven unsatisfactory and he cautioned the farmers against blending the breeds. Mr. Phelps is strongly in favor of keeping individual daily records of each cow in the dairy so that small producers may be eliminated. Little attention should be paid to trivial matters, such as solid colors, black or buff noses; rather that the productivity of the cow be considered. He explained the physical requirements of the ideal type of dairy cow, laying stress on the development of the udder and milk producing organs. The best cows, he said, are those whose udders are flabby when milked out rother than fleshy.

Mr. Oswald is one of the most extensive peach growers in Maryland, having gone into poultry husbandry as a side issue, and it was from this standpoint that his lectures were delivered. He explained that poultry is divided into "dairy" or egg-producing varieties, and "beefy" or market fowls, being similar to cattle in this particular. Among the dairy chickens are classed the Leghorn, Rhode Island Red, Game, Black Minorca and all Asiatic breeds. The "beefy" chickens most suitable for market are the Buff Cochin, Brahma and Langahang. The lecturer stated that from 175 to 200 is about the yearly laying for hens, though it is not uncommon, with proper care and attention for them to lay 225 eggs a year. Fowls are susceptible to colds as much so as human beings, so it is important that they be properly housed. Well ventilated houses are necessary and the best results are obtained by confining the fowls during the winter months. Hens compelled to forage, the lecturur explained, drop off in laying. Scratch feed of oats, cracked corn, rye and wheat tends to keep up laying during the winter. Wet mash made of scraps from the kitchen mixed with clover or alfalfa was recommended also dry mash containing linseed meal, which facilitates moulting. A strong point made by the lecturer was his caution to the farmers not to constantly sell fowls from the flock merely because of early maturity. This he decried because such practice leaves the flock composed of "runts," which should be disposed of rather than the larger ones.

Mr. Oswald's talks were entirely along practical lines, his methods being readily within range of the farmer. He exhibited a model of a portable hen house in use on his farm in Western Maryland which answers every purpose. The cost to build this character of house with capacity for 30 laying hens is but $6. The house is of open front construction, containing glass windows admitting sunlight, with a detachable screen in the front to enable proper ventilation. The house can be made of inexpensive lumber covered with tar paper. By building them on a sled-like base they can be moved from place to place on the farm.

At the meeting in Frederick on Saturday Mr. Oswald also delivered a lecture on Horticulture and the science of reclaiming old orchards. Mr. Oswald and his brother are the owners of large orchards at Chewsville, Washington county, which is in the heart of the Peach Belt of Western Maryland. Engaged in horticulture on an extensive scale, his lectures on the care of orchards and development of fruit were of a most instructive nature.

WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over 40 years' experience—a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter of this sort has the most careful consideration and is regarded as sacredly confidential. Many sensitively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distasteful examinations are generally needless, and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

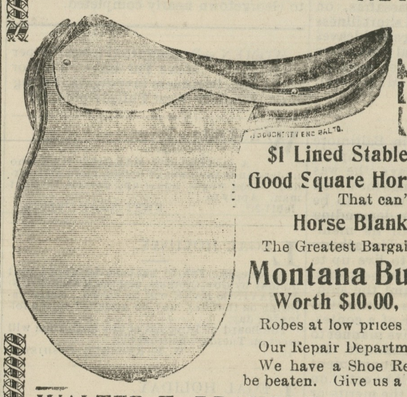

Dr. Pierce's treatment will cure you right in the privacy of your own home. His "Favorite Prescription" has cured hundreds of thousands, some of them the worst of cases.

It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. The only one good enough that its makers dare to print its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. There's no secrecy. It will bear examination. No alcohol and no habit-forming drugs are found in it. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Don't trifle with your health. Write to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, Buffalo, N. Y.—take the advice received and be well.
