HOW TO MAKE HIM HAPPY

Minister's Correspondents Show Deep Insight Into Question.

FEED WELL-KEYNOTE TO WIVES

Try These On Hubby

Some recipes suggested for "happy husbands" by Dr. Wharton and others:

"Feed him well."

"Trust your husband with the latch key."

"Let him rest when he comes home."

"Let him think he is the only one in the world for you."

"Don't nag; don't be jealous; don't allow gossips in your home."

Justice Loden announces that he will add this course to his College of matrimony.

"Feed him well" was the recipe for happy husbands given Sunday night by Rev. Dr. Henry M. Wharton, pastor of Brantly Baptist Church, in a sermon on "Happy Husbands, and How to Make Them." This was also the unanimous opinion of all the men present, and there were many there who looked well fed, as does Dr. Wharton himself.

This was all brought out in the first letter "From a Woman with Much Experience," which was read by Dr. Wharton. It was as follows:

"My husband works hard to make his little money. So every night I have a nice dinner, which I know will please him, waiting on the table. After dinner I let him take his rest and try to cheer him after his day of toil. When he is not so prosperous looking I cut out my expense account, do my own work and make my own clothes until things take a better turn. This year I have not spent a penny on a new hat. I remodeled mine of last year. But I keep myself well enough dressed for him not to be ashamed of me. Women spend too much money and keep their husbands forever running after more money, so neither has time to be happy."

Another letter said:

"Give a man a good meal. Let him take his rest and make him comfortable. Give him his way in everything he wants. Trust him with the latchkey and do not be forever nagging after him and reciting your troubles of the day. He has had his own troubles and is not in condition to bear yours too."

He Drew First Prize.

Then a married man, and probably a fat man, wrote his sage advice, which Dr. Wharton next read:

"Marriage is a game of chance and I drew first prize. If we have the price we have porterhouse steak and mushrooms. If not, we have round steak and onions. If things get too monotonous we take a trip, perhaps not together. She has never interferred with my goings-out and my comings-in and I have never come home drunk. I have a contented wife, and I have been married 18 years. I intend to go to Heaven with her."

Dr. Wharton Lays Down Rules.

Several rules were next laid down by Dr. Wharton. He said:

"It all depends on you women. You can be a joy forever or you can be a mill-stone about his neck. But the first rule is to appreciate him. Set the true value on him. Let him be first all the time and first everywhere with you. He is the breadwinner and protector, so let him know that you trust him. Do not be ashamed of his business. If his business is not honest get him to change it.

"Be lovable. You need not wash in silks or cook in satins, but when the day is done put on decent clothes and adorn your hair and greet him with a kiss. Do not burden him with your petty troubles—that Tommy has stumped his toe or that the cook is grumpy. Do not nag after him. That is why saloons and clubs do such a large business. Look out for jealousy and do not let a gossip into your home. If you cannot trust your husband it is best that you leave him. And take him to Heaven with you."

After the sermon Dr. Wharton's wife was consulted on her pet recipe for making her husband so contented and even actually happy. She was almost afraid to give her opinion, but it was: "Let him do as he likes."
