GORMAN SPEAKS AT CAMP-MEETING

Candidate For Democratic Nomination for Governor Lauds The Influence of the Mother, of the Home, And of Religion.

Salisbury, Md., August 4th.—A most decided innovation at the Methodist camp meeting at Hebron, about six miles from Salisbury, today was a speech by a candidate for an office, Senator A. P. Gorman, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for governor. Camp-meetings are favorite resorts of politicians and office-seekers. There they meet voters and talk politics. It remained for Mr. Gorman, however, to be the first candidate for an office who was ever invited to deliver an address to such a gathering in Wicomico county. Of course, his speech was entirely non-partisan, and upon its conclusion he was congratulated by those in charge of the camp-meeting for the appropriateness of his remarks.

When it was first suggested that Mr. Gorman make an address he demurred, as anything he might say might be interpreted as an effort to win voters. When, however, the preachers and laymen pressed the invitation and assured him that the tenters and visitors expected him to speak he yielded.

Senator Jesse D. Price, whose guest Mr. Gorman was during his stay in Wicomico, introduced the senator, saying that the invitation had been extended by the committee in charge of the speakers.

"We ought to mix our religion and our politics to a greater extent than we do," said Senator Price. "I do not mean partisan politics, but the higher principles involved, directly and indirectly, in politics. Political parties are the instruments of government. If, therefore, political parties are elevated by religious influences, the better will be our government. We want to make ourselves and our fellowmen better citizens. Good citizens mean good government."

Mr. Gorman's Speech.

"I am deeply appreciative of your kind invitation to deliver an address," said Senator Gorman. "It is extremely gratifying to visit Wicomico county and to greet on this occasion the stalwart citizens of your thrifty section. My earliest recollections are of camp meetings. My good grandmother had an abiding faith in the camp meeting in our neighborhood, in Howard county, and thither she took her grandchildren, and there we led a delightful life under the branching oaks. The impressions there gained have ever been an inspiration.

"I realize that home is the foundation of the best that is in our lives. It is the foundation of our government. In these groves the home gathers. Here we have the best influences of our homes, Here we hear the preachers expound to us laymen in the simplest words the teachings of our Master. It is here that our boys and girls receive lasting impressions of religion.

"I am a great believer in the mother's influence. My christian mother instilled in me true religious principles and precepts. How well we remember the mother's kiss! How well we remember her ministrations during our illness! How well we remember the gentle hand that soothed our brow! How well we remember her prayers, her admonitions of danger, her saintly advice, her sacrifice for us.

"In later life we recall our mothers as ministering angels. Think of the mother's influence upon us, how she taught us to be brave, to be courageous, to be faithful to our trusts, to be loyal in our friendships. How much we owe our mothers for our success! How much we owe them for all the good and beauty in this world!

"I am sure that this campmeeting and the teachings here will inspire us all to better deeds and better lives and will aid us in achieving a more perfect civic righteousness."

Greeted by Democrats.

Senator Gorman devoted the morning to a tour of the city. He was accompanied by Senator Jesse D. Price and former Senator M. V. Brewington, who introduced him to leading merchants and citizens of the town. A cordial handshake and pleasant words greeted the Senator. He renewed his acquaintance with Mr. William P. Jackson, Maryland member of the Republican National Committee, who lives here.

Mr. Gorman was greatly pleased with the beauty and tidiness of the homes here and agreed with the comment of Hon. W. J. Bryan, who, after a visit here some years ago, said it was the seat of more beautiful homes than any place of its size which he had ever visited.
