

so the factory bell is termed by free among the spindles—in the summer at sunrise, and in the morning before the break of day to wake the operatives' from their slumbers newal of their daily toils. They had a few moments to dress, when again summons them to the content of their labors, which never till about 8 o'clock in the evening, interruptions for meals, of only 30 minutes' duration. Even the most delicate to the most important of nature, are measured out by the bell, which rings the "operatives" to their food and then rings them in to their tasks. The writer of these things to be facts; for he long in the neighborhood of the dining establishments, and had his long late and early by the jingling of the slave bells. They can be by hundreds and thousands in every town in New England.

In the Lowell Advertiser is a constant veridical in throughout New England; and yet, of the slaveholding corporations, members of the corporations themselves talk of other people's being to enslave millions? We talk of sessions of England; and yet in the operatives in factories work hours in 5 days of the week, and on Saturday. Here, they are at least three holidays in the year, and twice the number. Yet, in these slave-pens, with a driver in a task-master in each counting-house are required to do an hour of work each day more than in the free states of England, the mother country.

These above stated are so well known to New England men who know about a manufacturing village or a central point of them only in his mind surprise at the present in which dictates it, or wonder at a franchise which innocently leads to the perpetuation of such glaring inequalities.

Upon the subject of factory operations, I will make one remark in relation to the proscription of opinion's sale, upon the "operatives" by the of the manufacturing corporations, or servile horde of overseers. As a fact, it may be stated that no one is employed at the factories who is not either vote according to the will of the employer, or at least be silent vote at all. If these requirements of the master are not regarded, the most recent "operative" is dismissed with a discharge. Soon after the vote of the president of election of this spirit of proscription was gracefully displayed by many of the manufacturers of N. England—being, "body knows, nearly all whigs, promoter in which the business of power was carried on; was this; After it was that Mr. Polk had succeeded, and by these men, and their servile connected with the press. Their fact were partially stopped, and those in of erection were suspended on the that the manufacturing business had been put under the new administration. Of course, this large number of hands out of employment, but those selected for dismission overcast, while the whigs were re- it was in this cunning way that tion was practised by wholesale in New England. Having got rid democrats, and supplied their places while whigs, the machinery was a in motion, and the walls of sus- factories again began to ascend.

is one of the reasons why the A- democracy demand a change in ers of the general government in. And let me here say, in conclu- will have this change, how- tant complacent Secretaries may mply with their just and righteous. The American democracy will remain at peace with those they need in power, if they permit, a majority of whigs to hold and responsible places under the face of the fact that every dem- ocratic would have been prescribed had succeeded, and of the fact of the fact of their more and their breath- ing was proscribed by the late pres- idency, the sacred right of free the exception of a few partial in different parts of the country ther has continued uninterruptedly vest operations have consequently idly proceeded with, and in most southern counties the bulk of the is being carried. In the North of there is still a considerable quan- tity abroad; but the lately experi- un- dary days have brought the crops amazingly, and in situations where back it was feared the corn would arrive at maturity, the sickle has been actively employed.

the whole our prospects as to the have undergone an immense im- prove since the 20th of August, but those that the evil effects of a de- cided Summer have been entirely re- moved be altogether unreasonable.

a great proportion of the wheat of the fall will be of inferior qual- ity, and the deficiency from the state of the ear, so generally of corn, can have been made good, and therefore adhere to the opinion expressed on former occasions, viz, that the falling off in meal in con- sequence of the want of weight and other- inferior meal properties of the berry, the acreable produce will be found short of an average. In judging of the probable value of wheat during the ensuing Winter, the injury which potatoes have suffered in many of those districts where this article is most extensively grown must not be overlooked. Until lately the blight or to whatever else the failure is attribu- ble, was supposed to have extended no farther than the South of England and the Channel Islands.

Within the last week, however, complaints have reached us from Lincolnshire, Cambridgeshire & Yorkshire, from which it would appear that the extent of the ravages made by the disease is not yet ascer- tained. Considering how large a portion of the food of all classes consists of pota- toes, so extensive a failure must be regard- ed as a great calamity. Already prices have risen considerably, and it is certain that if the mischief should prove anything like so extensive as it is represented to be, the consumption of bread stuffs must be increased enormously.

These considerations lead to the conclu- sion, that though no material advance may occur in quotations of wheat immediately, the article must hereafter rise in value. In speaking of potatoes we omitted to men- tion one important fact, viz; that orders have been received here from Holland and Belgium for the purchase of the article at very high rates, while their export has been prohibited by the Government of the last named country. We have heard it reported, on good authority, that a contract has already been closed at Poole to ship a thousand tons to Holland. The export of agricultural produce from England to the Continent is certainly a new feature.

During the last week, the fields in our immediate vicinity have undergone a more rapid clearance than we recollect to have witnessed in the same time for many a year. The grain, too, was in the most per- fect order, and being submitted to the im- mediate operations of the flail, was brought to market in a condition quite superior to what we have been accustomed to find so soon after having been reaped. Some farm- ers state that they have experienced a partial deficiency in the oats from blight. From the examination however, of a great many samples in the ear, we have not been able to discover the existence of this dis- ease to a more than usual extent. In the mountain districts reaping has not yet generally commenced—but within the last week the color of the grain has been greatly changed, and even in the latest districts a week or two of weather such as we have been favored with for the last fortnight or three weeks, will bring the sickle into general requisition, and should think, much be- yond the usual period.—Newry Telegraph.

THE HARVEST OF THE CONTINENT.— The harvest was proceeding favorably in Germany; the yield of wheat is generally moderate, some important districts being bad, particularly in East Prussia & Posen, Galicia and Croatia; in Pomerania and Mecklenburgh and the quality good. The minor crops have failed extensively in the North of Europe, and the potato disease is now general; we have not heard of any country north of the forty-fifth degree of latitude which has escaped the prevailing disease, which appears not to be confined to particular soils or particular sorts of potatoes.

We have had communications from more than one well-informed correspondent, announcing the appearance of what is called "cholera" in potatoes in Ireland, especially in the North. In one instance the crop had been digging potatoes the finest had ever seen from a particular field, and a particular ridge of that field, up to Monday last. On digging in the same ridge on Tuesday he found the tubers all blasted, and unfit for the use of man or beast. All through Fingal serious famine has already been sustained.—Dublin Freeman's Journal.

The potato crop in the neighborhood, as well as in other places, seems to be a complete failure.—Lynn Advertiser.

WORMS CAUSE DEATH.—If there ever was a time when parents should be watch- ful over the health of their little ones, or bear in mind the above saying, the present is such a time. Although worms are com- mon in the young, and frequently in the old and middle aged, at all times, at this season of the year when fruit is so plenty, and so little regard is had to the quantity and qual- ity eaten, the danger from worms is very greatly increased, and too much caution can- not be used in detecting the symptoms which indicate their presence. Dr. Sherman has discovered a specific. His Worm Lozenges will eradicate them when all other means fail. They have been effectually tried for the last four years, and have never been known to fail; children take them without any difficulty, and none who have ever used them are dissatisfied with their effects.

OBITUARY.

We know when moons shall wane,
When summer birds from far shall cross the plain—
When autumn's hue shall tinge the golden field,
But who shall teach us when to look for these?

Is it when spring's first gale
Comes forth to whisper when the violets lie?
Is it when the roses in our path grow pale?
They have one season—all are ours to die!

Departed this life on Thursday morning last, 9th inst., MR. ANNA MARIA FAULKNER, consort of Mr. Wm. H. Faulkner, of this town, in the 21st year of her age.

The demise of this amiable lady and affec- tionate young wife, seems to demand some- thing more than a mere announcement.— There were some circumstances in her life, and some also in her death, the recollections of which, now that she is far away from us, are reviving and pleasant. They span the gloom encircling us, with rainbow effulgence and glory. What were they?

In life, she reflected upon death; in death, she anticipated life. The child of pious par- ents, she grew up under the tenderest reli- gious influences. The principles thus early inculcated, continued with her like guardian angels, protecting her pathway amid the trials of life. The sense she entertained of her need of a Saviour, which seemed to be almost a part of her being, was apparently greatly deepened at a religious revival in the Methodist Protestant Church, during the past year. It was at that time, and under those circumstances, that the writer made his acquaintance with her. She then was a mourner in Zion—her "greatest desire," as she said, being to obtain religion.

The religious services alluded to were brought to a close—leaving Mrs. Faulkner still uncomfited, but still enquiring for "Beloved." Her concern seemed to be deeply imbedded in the depths of her soul; and often, we are informed, did she retire to pray to "Him who heareth in secret." But still the prize she sought was not realized.

Another scene opens. This interesting one is "sick unto death." Death poises his lance for the fatal thrust! The Conqueror of Death, high on His throne in glorious light, heard the suppliant's cry. He sent "A gift of strength for her to die."
She was then serene, calm, resigned; "I do not think I shall be afraid to die," she said. And afterwards, when the hour of her departure drew nigh, she remarked, "I shall soon be in my grave. I shall soon be with my Jesus!"

She is now gone. Our hope is cheering that she is with the Lord.

But our thoughts now turn to the bereav- ed husband. Lonely indeed must be his lot. Oh that he may be sustained in his bereave- ment with the consolation of God! May his great affliction be made tributary to his everlasting good. No prayer one who gives him most freely his sympathies and prayers.

Easton, Oct. 13, 1845.

THE PRINTER'S OFFERING.

Mourning ones, weep no longer,
Let your sighs be hush'd and still;
Happy spirits, round her thronging,
Shout ascending Zion's hill,
Weep not for the lov'd departed,
The fairest flowers fade and die;
Jesus soothes the broken hearted—
His grace prepares them for the sky.
