THE GREAT BRITAIN.—The steam packet ship Great Britain, we learn from the New York Commercial, was hauled into the sectional floating dock, at the foot of Rutgers street, on Saturday morning, preparatory to being raised from the water, to make the repairs rendered necessary by the damage done to the propeller, &c. during her late passage from Liverpool. At 12 o'clock she was completely floated in, and they were adjusting the fastenings, preparatory to applying the steam power to raise her. The extreme stern of the vessel projected a few feet beyond the last section.

The New York correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger gives the following description of her raising:—

The feat of docking and elevating her, for the purpose of mending the breakage of the paddles of her propeller which was sustained while she was floundering amongst the Nantucket shoals, was accomplished with the most perfect success upon the Sectional Floating dock, at the foot of Rutgers street—that same dock which government in its wisdom, (or in some other spirit rather less commendable) rejected, in favor of the dark, cumbrous, and enormously expensive stone Dry Dock. In less than 5 hours after the bow of the steamer entered the dock, it was carried high and dry over the middle of the street, and her huge hull was perched above all surrounding things, like the body of a church above surrounding tombstones. The bottom of the vessel was as bright, & almost as untarnished, as the brush of the painter had left it, and had sustained no injury of any description. One of the beams of the propellor was broken off close up to the shoulder, and the other, next to it, about midway—the bonnet, or paddle, severed short off at the stem. Thousands repaired to the spot towards evening to gaze and wonder at the monster; and especially her propeller, whence she has received the tremendous obstruction which had inflicted the damage, is, & always will be, amongst the unexplained wonders of the day. The smallness of the propeller struck me with some surprise, especially as I had just before seen, at the hydraulic dock, an iron steamship of not one-fourth her size, with two propellers, each presenting a much larger surface, and each apparently much more powerful than the single one of this British wonder.

THE LONDON TIMES of the 20th ult., in a leading editorial, elaborates a foul calumny against the American Government. —It states that "slave shackles of every strength and size, for men and women old and young," have been bro't up from the wreck of the U. S. steam frigate Missouri, and carried off in cart loads to store; that these shackles are "such as are used in the slave-trade, and are own brothers to those found on board of vessels engaged in the traffic." The intimation from all this is plainly enough charged that the Missouri, either on behalf of the American government, or of Mr. CUSHING, its accredited Minister, was engaged in a slave trading expedition.

The New York Courier alluding to this infamous slander, gives the following account of the usages of the naval service in fitting out ships of war:

Vessels of war, upon leaving port, no matter under what circumstances or upon what errand,always go prepared for a state of war. They are always provided with the weapons for an actual conflict, & with all the implements which such a conflict, and its result, may demand. A vessel, moreover,on going forth with the prospect or possibility of an engagement, always counts upon a victory. She expects to win the battle, and she therefore always goes prepared to secure the prisoners, whom she expects to take. This is a regulation which, we feel safe in saying, prevails in every navy in the world. It has always obtained in the British navy, and their books of allowance, as well as ours, designate the provisions in this respect made for each class of their vessels. In the American service the complement of Irons for a ship of the line is 200 hand irons, or handcuffs, and 100 fetters, or leg-irons, the complement for a steam frigate of the class of the Missouri which carries 8 guns and 2 swivels, mounted, & was pierced for 24, is 150 fetters and 300 handcuffs. The fact that the complement for a frigate is greater than the complement for a ship of the line notwithstanding its size, number of men, &c., are less, shows clearly that the irons are intended, not mainly to be used upon the crew in case of mutiny, but for prisoners taken in battle, as it is supposed a steam frigate like the Missouri will take more than a ship of the line. The Missouri was provided with her complement of irons, as indeed with the other arms and munitions of war; and these are the irons that have been taken from the wreck.

The Times could hardly have been ignorant of the usage here referred to. The whole story which it details with much deliberation of purpose to make it as horrible as fancy could depict, bears evidence only of that hostile feeling towards the American government and people which the periodical press of England seems ever ready to stir up and inflame. These manifestations of bitter hatred must have their effect in fixing enmity between the two countries. There will be a long arrearage of insult and contumely to come up for settlement whenever the course of events shall compel a rupture between the Republic and her calumniators. British travellers in the United States, with here and there an exception, make up their published books with little else than sneers and sarcasms,and misrepresentations and abuse of us and our institutions; and with these staples of falsehood & malignity the public mind of England is fed. There must be a result to all this which the peace-makers of both countries will find it difficult to avert.—Balt. American.

"The handkerchief!—the handkerchief!" cried Othello—"d—nit," said a sailor in the pit—"blow your nose with your fingers, and go on with the play!"

THE POTATOE DISEASE IN EUROPE.—Some persons in this country have supposed that our deficiency in potatoes might be made up in some measure, by importations from Europe, but the disease is as extensive and fatal in that quarter as in this. Excepting in the North of England, it prevails throughout England, and in many places on the continent. In some parts of Europe, potato constitutes the principal food for human sustenance as well as a large portion for animals, and this calamity will be severe indeed.

In that quarter, as well as this, there are many conjectures as to the cause of the disease, and different opinions prevail as to its operation. Some attribute it to extremely hot weather, which produced a very rapid growth, and the cold, wet weather which succeeded, causing a chill and stagnation of the juices, and consequently decay. Some writers state that the disease commenced in the leaves,while the tubers were sound; others say that it commences in the root, and that the top of the potato, and second, are frequently first affected. Again it is stated by others that the disease commences first just above the old potato, and then spreads to the new tubers and to the top. Thus, after numerous experiments and investigations, all seems mere conjecture and uncertainty.

☞"SHE WILL DIE" unless you can get her relieved from those dreadful worms.—Well, I fear she will. I have tried almost everything, but she only gets worse What shall I do? Why, go and buy a box of Sherman's celebrated Worm Lozenges, give them to your child according to the directions and my word for it, in one week's time your child will be well. I have never known them to fail, and I have seen them used in hundreds of cases, and in one case particular when the child voided nearly a pint of worms. Rest assured that they are the greatest specific ever known. How strange it is that parents will see their children suffer for days and weeks with the most marked symptoms of worms, and instead of getting this specific, this celebrated "Worm Destroyer," they will trifle away the time, filling up the stomach with useless trash, until the strength of the sufferer becomes exhausted, and she dies, and the minds of parents are filled with unavailing regrets. Had they used Sherman's worm Lozenges, in time their child might have been restored, and lived to bless them for the means they made use of for its preservation. They are pleasant to the taste, and can always be given without any difficulty or danger.

☞Temperance Notice.

THE Committee appointed to prepare a Constitution and By-Laws for the Temperance Society of Easton, and to announce a meeting of the said Society, through the papers of the town, beg leave to advertise to the citizens of Easton and its vicinity, that there will be a on Tuesday next, 28th inst. (this evening) at 7 o'clock, in the M. E. Church.

And the Committee would embrace this opportunity to call the attention of all persons, male and female, old and young, to this important subject. It is one in which we should all feel a great solicitude, for in it all have a great interest involved, an interest fraught with the weal or wo of society.

All must admit the great evil of intemperance—the use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and their traffic. It has filled our land with wailing, and hundreds and thousands have been the victims of its power.—The Temperance cause contemplates its extermination and forms the basis upon which all persons, sects and parties, may meet and unite in promoting sobriety and good will among men. She took with her a variety of clothing, among which, a large black and white blanket shawl. It is very likely she may have gone to Baltimore in the Steamboat Osiris, the morning she left from St. Michaels, as she has acquaintances in Baltimore who no doubt would aid her escape.

I will give twenty-five dollars for her if taken in this county and lodged in the jail at Easton, or fifty dollars if taken out of the county and secured so that I get her.
