> For the Chronicle. To a Mint Julap. A PARODY.

JULAP! experience might have told me, That all must love thee who behold thee, Surely, experience might have taught, The dangers of the pleasant draught; But, placed in all thy charms before me, All I forget but to adore thee; But how much carsed by every lover, When ice is gone, and summer's over. How throbs the pulse, when first we view The mint that's wet with morning dew, And sparkles bright, or mildly throws A fragrance sweeter than the rose! How quick we hear it to our lips, And, to enjoy it, drink by sips! Fondly we hope 'twill be infinite, When, lo! 'tis gone in half a minute.
