The Doctor's Dog. Poor Dash! the humble faithful friend Of one the friend of all, Will now no more his steps attend, Nor hear his master's call.

He'll ne'er again, thro' street and lane, The lov'd physician trace, And by the patient's bed of pain, Demurely take his place.

Far aged, blind, bereft of strength-Tho' death he long defied, The Doctor's faithful friend, at length, Hath laid him down and died. Welcome, old dog! for many a year,

Wert thou to rich and poor; For well they knew that aid was near, When "Dash" approached their door.

And many a friend, with moisten'd lash, Will sigh to hear it said That honest, old, grey-headed "Dash," "The Doctor's Dog," is dead. Cambridge, May 23d, 1849.

The Printer's Hour of Peace. Know ye the Printer's hour of peace? Know ye an hour more fraught with joy? Than ever felt the maid of Greece, When kiss'd by Venus' am'rous boy?

'Tis not when round the mazy case, His nimble fingers kiss the type; Nor is it when, with lengthened face, The sturdy devil's tale he grips.

Tis not when news of dreadful note His columns all with minion fill; Tis not when brother Printer's quote Th' effusion of his stump-worn quill.

"I'is not when in Miss Fancy's glass Long advertisements meet his eye, And seems to whisper as they pass, "We'll grace your columns by and by."

No-reader-no-the Printer's hour, His hour of real sweet repose, Is not when by some magic power His list of patrons daily grows.

But, oh! 'tis when the weather's clear, Or clad in hail, or rain, or vapor, He hears in accents soft and dear-"I've come to PAY you for the PAPER."
