GOOD RESOLVE.

The Baltimore Clipper has the following soliloquy, alike applicable to the country as the city: Solitoquy.—Can't get along so, and yet doing as much business as I did twenty years ago!-Then I saved money-now I'm spending it-absolutely going behind-hand every season! What's the difficulty? Profits are reduced, whilst rems and taxes, and expenses are increased! What shall I do? it's plain! I must do more business-multiply my profits by increasing the number of my customers. How shall I get more customers? By giving information to a greater number of people and inviting their custom. How? as other people dothrough the newspapers, cards, handbills, &c., &c. In short, I must advertise or quit business. As there is no remedy I will make a virtue of necessity. I will advertise! - I will.
