POET'S CORNER.

LINES .- BY MRS. HEMANS. 'Twas a lovely thought to mark the hours' As they floated in light away, By the opening and the folding flowers That laugh to the summer day; Thus had each moment its own rich hue,

And its graceful cup and bell, In whose colored vase might sleep the dew found they were only going on with their there, and there could even afford to trade And is not life in its real flight

Marked thus-even thus on earth, By the closing of one hope's delight And another's gentle birth? Oh, let us live, so that flower by nower Shutting in turn, may leave A lingerer still for the sunset hour, A charm for the shaded one!

From the Ladies' Garland. TO MY BOY. BY J. R. LOVELL. I never gaze upon thy form, Or mark thy soft blue eye Where "floats a dream of loteliness, Pure, passionate, and high" But that my heart must thrill with joy, And flutter with delight, To view thy spotless innocence In childhood's sunny light.

O! could I crave a boon for the - That earth can never give, It would not be a worldly croin, For which so many live; But it would be a spotless life Of innocence and peace, Such as would gain for thee alome, Where bliss shall never ceae.

A thorny maze, my lovely bea Thy destiny may be, From which a father's tender cre Can never rescue thee. But could my wishes be obtained Thy pathway should be free From all corroding griefs and cals That have surrounded me.

As time shall wing its onward fligt, 'Twill change thy rosy gleam Which lingers on thy parian brow In childhood's pleasing dream. Thy sparkling eye may yet be dim'd With grief's unbidden tear, Where no fond mother's dear care, Or father's smile can cheer.

Though now thou'lt fondly cling tore, My little smiling boy; Thou hast a place within my heart None else could e'er enjoy. Then as thy fleeting moments pass, May love and joy be thine Around one altar may we knel, And worship at one shrine
