Centreville State Rights.

TUESDAY MORNING, SEP. 25 1860.

JOB PRINTING.
We are prepared to execute at this office in the neatest manner JOB PRINTING of every description, at the shortest notice and on reasonable terms.—MAGISTRATES BLANKS kept constantly on hand and for sale for cash only.

BY STEAMBOAT OF MONDAY.

We clip the following items from the Baltimore Sun of Monday:—

MR. YANCEY TO BE AT EASTON AND PERHAPS AT CENTREVILLE.—We learn from the Baltimore Sun that Mr. Yancey of Alabama will speak at Easton to day. The boat leaving Baltimore this morning for Easton will take Mr. Yancey on board at Annapolis. Every effort will be made to get Mr. Yancey to speak at the meeting in Centreville on Tuesday next.

REPUBLICANS IN MARYLAND.—The New York Post, of Saturday, has the following:—

"Last evening Colonel Evans, editor of the Baltimore Patriot, addressed a republican club in this city, and announced his intention to support the republican candidates. He also stated that a grandson of Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, would support them. Mr. Evans, in the course of his remarks, avowed himself a follower of Henry Winter Davis, from which we feel at liberty to infer that Mr. Davis will support Lincoln and Hamlin also."

From a report in the Times of Mr. Evans' remarks, we quote:—

"As their chairman had said that he was from the State where lived and died Charles Carroll of Carrollton, it afforded him pleasure to inform this audience that the grandson of that Charles Carroll was with them heart and hand. [Applause.] He was a large planter, lived near Baltimore, owned more than sixty slaves, and there was no more devoted follower of Lincoln than Mr. McTavish, the grandson of Charles Carroll of Carrollton. [Applause.] He (Mr. Evans) was a follower of Henry Winter Davis." [Three cheers for Henry Winter Davis.]

The Philadelphia papers announce that Henry Winter Davis of Maryland writes to the Bell and Everett men of Easton, Pa., that thereafter he shall speak in favor of the election of Lincoln.

BLACK REPUBLICANISM IN MARYLAND.
SPEECH OF JUDGE MARSHALL.
A meeting of the Third Ward Republican Association was held on Thursday night last in Baltimore, to listen to addresses from W. L. Marshall, Montgomery Blair and William E. Gleason, who had been announced were expected to be present. There were about sixty persons assembled in the hall at 8 o'clock, when A. C. Williams President of the Association, called the meeting to order and after the transaction of business introduced Judge Marshall who proceeded to address the meeting.

In coming to the meeting, Mr. Marshall said, he had not previously entertained any expectations of addressing those assembled, but felt it his duty to endeavor to advance the cause of Republicanism. There were but few advocates of the cause in this city, but they had more privilege than in other parts of the State. He spoke of the contumely and opprobrium visited on such as advocated Republican doctrines, which he was surprised at. He said that the people had no faith in the misrepresentations, of the doctrines of the party as put forth by interested parties, and that they felt no apprehensions of evil resulting from their success.

He assumed the fact that the American party, or at least that portion led by Hon. H. Winter Davis, held precisely the same doctrines that the Republican party did. Especially was this the case with regard to slavery. He pronounced slavery an evil which works no good to and is calculated to depreciate labor.

It wanted the stimulus necessary to make labor honorable. The morals and every virtue of the human mind is degraded. The Republican party had no special love of the negro; their love was for the white man, whom they were desirous of advancing. Their object was to prevent the spread of slavery.

They had no desire to interfere with it where it was established. In all the speeches in Congress of the Republicans there was no desire manifested to interfere with it where it is existing. What they wanted was to prevent its deleterious effects from reaching a portion of the country where freemen had gone, and who without it would be a free and happy population. We contend that Congress has a right to legislate in reference to the condition of the white man. Beyond this no Republican proposed to go.

From the time when the Convention met to form the Constitution of the United States to the Missouri Compromise, and even to 1835, no one, either in or out of Congress, proposed to abolish slavery where it existed, or to settle it in new Territories. The ordinance of 1787 was passed while the Convention was sitting in Philadelphia and Congress in New York. Men of note were members of both bodies and acted in either occasion required. The territory thus controlled belonged to Virginia, which State had or was about to cede it. By the laws of that State slavery existed there, but Congress by the ordinance prohibited it.

Shall we say that the men of Virginia were ignorant of what they were doing? Among them was Judge Barbour a man extremely tenacious of whatever merit or demerit there was in slavery. He had denied the right of Congress to forbid slavery in the State, but afterwards conceded its right to abolish it in the west or north of Missouri. The speaker continued at length to advert to the opinions of Calhoun and others in regard to the question which he said was a stigma and drawback to the country. He referred to the Republican candidate, Lincoln, whom he eulogised. He concluded with asserting that the question at issue was whether capital, in the shape of slavery, should rule free labor.

Messrs. William E. Gleason and J. C. Emery, the editor of the Border State, then addressed the meeting which, at a few minutes before 10 o'clock adjourned.

GREAT UNION MEETING IN NEW YORK.
—A Fusion Electoral Ticket.—One of the largest political demonstrations of the campaign took place at the Cooper Institute, in New York, on Monday. It was a grand rally of all the opponents of Lincoln favorable to a "fusion" electoral ticket. The Herald estimates the number present at from 25,000, to 30,000, while The Tribune puts it down as high as 15,000. The meeting was composed of Breckinridge, Bell and Douglas men, and in addition to the thousands who thronged the large Institute building addresses were delivered from five different stands on the outside.

J. J. Henry, Esq., an eminent merchant, presided over the meeting in the building, assisted by a large number of vice-presidents for the city, and one for each State in the Union, Hon. John P. Kennedy was named for Maryland, and Gen. Leslie Coombs for Kentucky. Gen. Scott, Wm. B. Astor and Henry Grinnell were also on the list of vice presidents.

Among the speakers were the Hon. F. Wood, J. J. Henry, Esq., the Hon. H. W. Hilliard, of Alabama, Ex-Governor Morehead, of Kentucky, F. Holmes, Esq., of Boston, the Hon. John Cochrane, of New York, and Mr. Wright, of Missouri.

The substance of the resolutions adopted was that the Bell, Breckinridge and Douglas tickets in the State of New York should all be thrown overboard and a new ticket formed that shall be pledged to no candidate, and whose only duty shall be to vote so as to defeat Lincoln. The president of the meeting, Mr. Joshua J. Henry, was authorized to form this new ticket and promulgate it for the suffrages of the people.

The meeting was wound up by a grand torch-light procession, which was participated in by some six or eight thousand persons, bearing vari-colored torches and banners, and presenting one of the grandest spectacles ever witnessed in New York.

IMPORTANT SPEECH OF SENATOR SEWARD.—St. Paul, Sept. 18.—Senator Seward made to-day the great speech of the campaign. It was fuller and more elaborate than his Detroit speech. He looked to the acquisition of British America, Russian America, and Spanish America, and declared that the man was born who would live to see the American people coming to the harmonious understanding that this is a land of freedom and freemen, and that it is the land of the white man, and that whatever elements there are to disturb its present peace will before long pass away without endangering this great Union.

He felt that here we were not only before the shrine of freedom, but in the living universe of the Goddess of Freedom. The vital principle of the government was the equality of every member of it. It is the recognition of this principle which had made the capital of Minnesota equal in nine years to the capital of any slave State two hundred years old. Liberty, after all, was but the simple natural practice of exact justice to all men. Slavery is to-day, said he, not only powerless, but without influence in the American republic. Talking of the threats of the South to dissolve the Union, he asked, Who is afraid? (A voice—"No one.") Nobody is afraid; nobody can be bought.

He prophesied that the time would come when New York would cease to be the Empire State, and Pennsylvania cease to be the Keystone State, as Virginia had already ceased to be the Old Dominion. The New Dominion, the Empire State and they Keystone State would be hereafter in the Mississippi valley.
