

Thursday 8 July. Night 11. 1/2 o'clock. This morning was cloudy but about 4 o'clock the sun shone out quite pretty, and we have <sup>had</sup> a lovely evening. I have been quite busy to-day and did not get up stairs to dress until about 7 o'clock and was but half done when Nannie came running up stairs to tell me Ald. D. and a strange gentleman were down stairs. I hurried down and was introduced to the young gentleman but did not hear his name.
I forgot to add that M. was here
