

just returned from the South when a wire stating Aunt-Lottie had been taken suddenly ill with Pneumonia, reached me, and the second day after another message containing the sad news of her going away was received. She had been for poor health ever since Aunt-Rosa's death, and then losing Aunt-Hittie last-December only helped to weaken her more, as she had a serious heart-trouble, (enlargement of the Aorta) and was in constant danger of the return of the painful and distressing attacks caused by it! But when I learned she had Pneumonia, I really felt most fearful of the consequences,
