Dear Mark

I am going to write a letter, but before beginning, will have a one-sided chat with you, unless you will deign a reply to this, which doubtless you are too busy to do.

I thought to see you this morning, but as you did not come, at 12 1/2, I went out. it was such a lovely morning, could not stay in the house. After you left last night I fixed myself snugly in the large rocker - and had a jolly-nap; did you think I would say? no, a jolly time reading your papers; every one had retired and the room was so quiet and
