where the Attraction begun, and to examine the Line again, for the greater certainty.

Wednesday. April 18th. 1739.

This day proving rainy, the Surveyors could not proceed.

Thursday. April 19th 1739.

The Commissioners met, and return'd with the Surveyors, beyond the Place where the Attraction began, and having carefully examin'd the Line, they found it to have been justly run, and then proceeded on it, to a Plantation of Jacob Vernam in Thornbury Township.

Friday, April 20th 1739.

The Commissioners met, and thought proper to try the Instruments, to see if no Accident had altered the Variation; and upon a very careful Examination, found all the Needles to have the same Direction and Variation which they had at Philadelphia, as before set forth. And the Surveyors proceeded on the Line, and left off about half a Mile to the Westward of Joseph Hunts new Ground in Thornbury Township.

Saturday 21st April 1739.

The Commissioners met, and the Surveyors proceeded on the Line, to Abraham Marshalls in West. Bradford Township
