

Mr. Andrews the groom and I went into the laboratory.

We went out of the laboratory into the kitchen where a back door was open. Clapp Littlefield & I went down & the other went down, & I followed them - crawled upon my hands & knees, & saw some of the feathers pass to other parts of human remains which were buried up through the back door, & then laid on the floor. -

I saw nothing occurring while we were standing round the remains. I only noticed that the dog was very much agitated -

After the feathers were put in the box & the remains behind; and then the remains were removed into the laboratory, though I am not certain if their removal was made before or after the H. life.

I left the College building in charge of some officers for the night. I think the remains were put into the firing. I made no further search this night.

The next morning I found a woman a woman & boy & found a nest at 40th St & 4th Ave. I did not go down to the College till the afternoon but I was rolling. The afternoon when I went the other parts of the body had been found.
