

nuisance, arising from an injury peculiar to the plaintiff himself -
 There is no such peculiar damage suggested in this case.

Upon the 3^d Exception - & the 4th
 Following out the doctrine just contended for, no general allegation nor general evidence of damage will suffice to sustain the case - If the Special damage or an injury peculiar to the plaintiff alone can sustain the action, it should be specially pleaded. This doctrine applies as well to the Exception as to the motion in arrest of Judgment 8 Cowen 167

In this case the plaintiff counts upon a general injury arising from loss of wharfage - a general deprivation of benefits, and the evidence is as general as the allegations.

Butter 3, Kent 19 John Rep 223
 Besides this injury, the obstruction to the navigation of the River is common to a great number of people.

4 Mass & Sel 107
 8 Cowen 167