

disposing mind, memory and perfect in his understanding, - That the next morning about day break the deponent was awakened by the coming of Mr Piper to his House who told him that Mr McLean had in the night become extremely ill, and he believed was in immediate danger and requested the deponent to draw the Will as quick as possible, that this deponent presently began the draft, and Mr Piper promised that when he returned to Mr McLeans (as he intended to do directly) - that he would send Mr Piper to be ready to receive the Will, as soon as done, should Mr McLean seem to continue in immediate danger, that after this deponent had drawn the Will and waited some little time for the messenger, Mr McLean had himself promised as to send as is before mentioned (having not received also any message from Mr Piper which induced this deponent to think Mr McLean was not so ill as Mr Piper apprehended) this deponent then enclosed the draft and of the intended Will of Mr McLean together with the drafts, Notes and the former drafts above mentioned under cover directed to the said Mr McLean and dispatched his own servant with the same directing him if he should meet Mr McLeans Messenger to deliver him the Letter and send him back with it otherwise to proceed with himself to Mr McLeans and to deliver the Letter into the hands of Mr McLean, the servant when he returned told the deponent that he delivered the Letter to Mr McLean but that she said - it was too late for that Mr McLean her Husband <sup>had</sup> ~~was~~ died about 5 o'clock that morning. This deponent further saith that the paper to which this present deposition is annexed purporting to be the last Will & Testament of James McLean is with respect to the matter of it a true copy or draft from the Notes Memorandums and Instructions of the said James McLean as given and delivered to this deponent by the said James McLean for the purpose and whereby to draw the same into form for and as the
