

The Harpoon broke. Letting the Struck go again to commit his depredations. Providing his sore throat would allow him to do so. - We soon had the other one around, and George succeeded in darting another Iron directly through him - when he was drawn up to the Spout and then dispatched by the Sailors Knives. His liver was cut out. And offered to him - but he declined. Eating any more. And with a few words commensurate of throwing him on the tender Mercies of his brother Strunks. - All of this had happened during the hours of 2 and 4 P.M. and a light breeze was just for Captain. So that the ship would head her course. - Supper being called we all sat down. Mr Mann with the rest who had taken all his meals with us for that day. - After Tea raised a sail. Ahead. - I then went out on the Deck to see to catch some Dolphins and there played until the Sun set and the strange sail was something like one mile distant. - He had taken on board. and had nothing but his double reefed Topsails and Foremast. - It was on the Glimmer of Twilight which in this Tropical region is beautiful. - when we came nearly abreast of him when he showed his colors. - We answered by hoisting them soon as possible. - when he lowered a boat. and pulled for us. - We were then heading S.W. by W. and sailing about 2 miles per hour. - The boat soon came along side. and her crew. came on board. - She proved to be the Barque Cornelia of New Bedford. - "Pole Master had been out 21 months. - See Banded Oil. - Said the Ship we saw on the morning was the Barque Alto of N.B. - and Marcellus. - They intended going into Barbados. this fall. to find him oil home and then would come. - longer would very much depend on their success. - and price of oil. - They staid until 8 P.M. - and after giving a young man whom I became acquainted with a small bunch of Peas. to read. - The boat was called away. - and soon disappeared amidst the gloom of night. - Then ship had. hung out a light which could be plainly seen from our deck. - So passed away. another set of Strangers. - They also informed us that the ship Boat Cooper had passed them a short time since and was making badly. - It was at the pumps all of the time she was bound for San Francisco. Cal. -

After the boats departed. I took Henry. and seated on the Lee rail. Pointed to him the light from the preceding ship. The moon shone down brightly. and the little fellow. putting his hands and arms in the folds of my shirt. went fast asleep. - George was taking his usual. constant smokes. and led me to a story told by the Steward. "The doctor was safely land away. in his narrow stumpy awning. the sunning at 4 in the morning. - Mary was roaming around. and passing Mrs. said I was wanted aft. - Came was conversing with Mrs. Mary. and with Mary. I went on the Starboard side of the Poop deck so as to hear clearly. should she awake. - She then told me that Mrs. Mary and the Capt. had a series of words. - and that the Capt. had not spoken to her during the day. - It proceeded from a matter that arose at the Breakfast Table in presence of all. on Sunday morning. by Mrs. Newman venturing the remark. that if her husband sat at the other table she should do likewise. - Mrs. M. said she believed in every one doing as they thought best. perhaps there was some good reason for not wanting to go to that table. or for leaving the one they were then at. The Capt. said. that Mrs. M. need not make a dispute of every thing that was said. - That it did make quite a difference with (Came and Mary) then. their husbands. eating at the other table. Mrs. N. says. why don't you tell them. The Capt. said if he was the Steward he would tell them. - Mrs. N. says. If I was in the Stewards place. I would set Place for them. - To this discussion ended. But why was it necessary for them to have the Capt. taken. the reason was. "It is too crowded. - and not room for the children. - But there was Mr. Mann. why not ask him to resign his Place. to the Table. and join the ladies. - The reason was this. - The Capt. did not speak to me. or to my wife. Ever since we first left N.Y. - I had eaten with the ladies. - So as to make room. at the other table. - Mrs. N. was the Capt. favorite. and did not speak to. Came or Mary. consequently they wished to be rid of him. as it could. embarrassingly perhaps to sit at the same table and not converse. -
