July 10th, Made the land of Kamshatka this morning; stowed in for the land until evening and took ship; the tops of the mountains are covered with snow.

July 11th, At noon we were of the entrance of the Bay of Petrovskii in Lat 53° - Lon 153° 46'; saw a small craft in shore of us, supposed to be the Russian cutter, lowered for Right Whales towards night.

July 14th, Early this morning three of the boats went in shore fishing.

July 15th, We arrived at the ship to day about noon after sleeping all night on the beach; we pulled about 30 miles each way, the land being very deceiving, and thinking we were close in; found 3 Russian hunters on shore, who provided us with meat or we should have gone hungry; when we returned to the ship, we found the old man in a terrible fluster about us, imagining some thing had befallen us; the ship keeps had hauled the chains up and got the anchors off the bows, all ready to start for port if we had not made our appearance; found no fish but saw 3 bears ashore.

July 16th, Beating up for Petrovskii; off the Harbor at night.

July 17th, Entered the Bay with a strong breeze right ahead; beating up in company with a French ship; parted the fore top sail sheets whilst tacking, and getting ster way on us we let go the anchor; the other ship also came to anchor, about 3 miles below the town; the old man went ashore this afternoon, and brought off some salmon; found the ship Charles of Boston in here trading; the French ship is the Cachalot of Kaine, which came in for the Capt. left here with a broken leg 2 mos before 5 whs the season; there is also a brig belonging to the Russian Fur Company, from the North West Coast of America.

July 18th, Got underway this morning about 7 o'clock but the wind falling off let go anchor again; hove up again about 10 o'clock and about noon anchored in the harbor; the Cachalot arrived shortly after; sent our water casks on shore and filled them.
