

|                                     |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |                              |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
|-------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Monday30 th          | 1832Through the day strong gailsfrom E N E under closereefed to sailsLat obs 28° 58' North                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | Saturday4 th  | 1832Begins with strong breezes fromE N E steering N S Ethrough the night lay byday ends in lat 31° 15' N                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Tuesday31 st         | Begins with strong gailsfrom E N EEmployed stowing down sailLat obs 29° 54' N                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | Sunday5 th    | Begins with fine breezes from S Esteering S S W S a fine back whaleLat obs 29° 04' NLong by Chronometer 168° 32' E                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| WednesdayAugust 1 st | Through the day strong gailsfrom East Employed stowingdown sail at 9 A M Shipmagnet Passed close under thelee to the South did not speakhim Being ruggedLat obs 29° 38' N                                                                                                                                                                                                                | Monday6 th    | Begins with cloudy weatherat E S E steering to S S EWhales is not plenty and whereto go to find them more so I know notany ends with fine weather employedin caulking ship and squaringRealtines on Lore RiggingLat obs 28° 45' N                                                                                                                                            |
| Thursday2 nd         | Begins with more pleasant weatherWind at Eastat 4 P M finished stowing downat 9 A M Sun & sails towindwardLat obs 29° 32' N                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | Tuesday7 th   | Begins with fine weatherS E by E steering to SouthEmployed caulking ship &squaring Realtines &c & no whalesat 4 P M Saw a large spermwhale going to the Westat 5 P M Lored and killed himTook him to the shipthrough the night lay by the whaleat 8 A M Begin cutting fat allin but the case Saw a ship toLeeward steering to the SouthLat obs 29° 00' N |
| Friday3 rd           | Begins with pleasant weatherand fine breezes from E N Etacked to the S E by Eat 2 P M Lake ship magnetof Warren 600 lbs saw 2 whalesto Leeward <sup>300 lbs</sup> Hoggua & <sup>600 lbs</sup> Bolluckthe Hoggua lost 4 men byattempting to save one that hadfell over board the Boat founderedand all on board her were lostHappy with to be EnvyedLat obs 29° 04' N | Wednesday8 th | Begins with fine weatherS E by E Employed Baling Case &cat 2 P M Spoke ship Wagon the 2 ndat 6 A M Saw Whales Lored withoutSuccess Lat 28° 39' N                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |