About Politics And Some Politicians

week that his defeat was the result of sharp election practices and a broken pledge by Governor Faubus to "keep hands off" the election.

MILTON, Fla. — Governor Faubus of Arkansas last week turned a cold shoulder to proposals of the Santa Rosa County (Fla.) White Citizens Council for the setting up of a third party with him as its head. Faubus stuck to an earlier statement that he is "a loyal member of the Democratic party, which has always been big enough to hold people with different attitudes."

ATLANTA — Sen. Herman Talmadge told members of the Georgia Junior Chamber of Commerce last week that an attempt to change Senate rules which now permit unlimited debate would "threaten the whole fabric of our form of government."

NEW ORLEANS — Rep. F. Edward Hebert (D-La.) termed the defeat of Rep Brooks Hays of Arkansas "a tragedy that the House has lost such a valuable man," but said that it served as a warning to those who refuse to be counted either positively for or against segregation.

JACKSON, Miss. — Gov. J. Q. Coleman of Mississippi said on Wednesday that he would "have been an ingrate," had he refused to help Rep. Brooks Hays (D-Ark.) in his unsuccessful bid for reelection to Congress for his ninth term. Hays, he said, helped him on the Democratic Convention Platform Committee two years ago, and failure to acknowledge his call for help Monday would have been ingratitude.

LITTLE ROCK — Governor Faubus said last week that he would strongly oppose any legislative move to abolish the state's public school system in the anti-integration fight. "I feel certain," he said, "that a way will be found to return control of the school system to the people without disrupting the entire public school system."

ATLANTA — Sen.-elect Keating and Sen. Javits, both New York Republicans, arrived in Atlanta late Thursday to investigate the dynamiting of the Jewish Temple. From Atlanta they went to Birmingham, Ala.

WASHINGTON — The election of Dr. Dale Alford, Arkansas segregationist, has defeated Rep. Brooks Hayes in last week's Arkansas Fifth district race, is the second victim in candidate in history to be elected to Congress. The first was Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina in 1954.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. — Lee Foster of Knoxville, a segregationist candidate for governor, last week filed a $50,000 damage suit against police officials who chased him out of town when he appeared in Athens to make a campaign speech, accompanied by his campaign manager, John Kasper, segregationist rabble rouser.

LITTLE ROCK — Rep. Brooks Hays, on the eve of his defeat by Dr. Dale Alford in the Arkansas 5th District race for the House, deplored what he called "a sneak attack" on the Democratic primary. "If the Alford trickery were to become the pattern," he said, "there would be no assurance for candidates to campaign with the voters in the primary."

POTTS CAMP, Miss. — Rep. Whitten (D-Miss.) predicted last week that the South could possibly determine the next Presidential election if Southern states acted together and elected independent electors who might swing the election in either direction in the event of a close vote between the two major parties.

NEW ORLEANS — Louisiana voters gave a 2-to-1 lead to a pro-segregation proposal to authorize establishment of a private school system with public funds on the basis of early returns.

MILTON, Fla. — About 70 members of the Santa Rosa County White Citizens Council held an organization last week urging formation of a third party with Governor Faubus of Arkansas as its leader.

ATLANTA — The Southern Regional Council reported this week that the number of registered voters in the South has remained constant — in fact, made a slight gain over the 1956 despite racial controversy and disinterest in an off-year election. There was an estimated 1,266,488 on the voting rolls in 11 Southern states, representing 25 percent of those eligible.

HOUSTON, Tex. — Mrs. Charles E. White, 42 the mother of five children, defeated two white opponents by a margin of 6,296 votes for election to the Houston School Board. She campaigned on the issues of school integration and Federal aid to schools and could not have been elected without white support.

The Fight For Justice Through The Courts

MIAMI, Fla. — William Holland, a West Palm Beach lawyer, last week asked a Federal Court to order the immediate admission of his son and other children to white West Palm Beach schools after the U.S. District Court of Appeals overthrew a ruling by District Judge Emmett C. Choate that the pupils had been barred under provisions of the Florida pupil assignment law and not because of race.

SAVANNAH — Solicitor General Andrew Ryan Jr., said last week that he is willing to conduct a probe into charges that the NAACP solicited clients for its suit to integrate the Fred Wessels housing project several years ago although it "seems rather tardy." He added that he would be glad to undertake the investigation "if Mr. Cook (Ga. atty. gen.) or anyone else now has evidence and/or testimony other than opinion and hearsay."

NORFOLK, Va. — A panel of three Federal Judges will hear the first of three cases challenging the legality of Virginia's anti-integration laws on Nov. 19. The three judges who will hear the suit filed by 20 parents of colored pupils are Chief Judge Simon E. Sobeloff, Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals; Judges C. F. Haynesworth and Walter E. Hoffman.

CHARLES E. WHITE, elected Tuesday to Houston's School Board.

ATLANTA—"So long as the Supreme Court's decision on school segregation is allowed to stand, this nation will never be free from the threat of judicial dictatorship and the Constitution and the rights of the American people will forever be subject to the whims of the men who transiently occupy the Supreme Court bench."—SEN. HERMAN TALMADGE of Georgia.

LITTLE ROCK — "Governor Faubus is a valuable enemy. I trust he stays healthy and active, coming out on the odd-numbered days with new plans to replace those which did not work on the even - numbered days. It is conceivable, that if the states choose to deny everyone an education rather than give up segregation, the Federal Government will find a way to fill the breach."—ROY WILKINS, NAACP national executive secretary, urging Little Rock residents to stand fast in their drive to desegregate the city schools.

WASHINGTON — "Any such move would result in unfavorable attitudes towards the Southerners responsible with reference to committee assignments and other activities both in the Senate and the House."—DEAN NAT CHAIRMAN PAUL M. EARTHA KITT

STAR GAZING:

Eartha's versatility amazes Satchmo over Benny at Fair

The amazing thing about Eartha Kitt's performance in last week's "Playhouse 90" television production was something the viewers could know nothing about . . . . the unbelievable versatility of the showgirl-turned-adress-singer-dancer-author.

Miss Kitt memorized all her lines for the "Heart of Darkness" dramatization in 16 hours . . . at the same time she was rehearsing her role for a command performance before Queen Elizabeth at the London Coliseum last Monday night.

Baltimore's Ethel Ennis, whom Benny Goodman featured at the Brussels World Fair, is singing at Philadelphia's Showboat cafe during the Valentine to Washington's Birthday stretch.

Speaking of the Brussels Fair, reminds that Louis Armstrong's 45,674 votes for "favorite musician," was tops. . . . Satchmo led Benny Goodman, who was second, by 29,529 votes. . . .

Ernestine Anderson has packed a new personal manager . . . . John Levy. . . . Johnny Mathis is due back in the States from his Australian tour late this week. . . . Count Basie to do an encore at Chicago's Blue Note in January.

Because there was such a demand for tickets to Erroll Garner's Sunday (9th) concert at Kentucky State College, the affair had to be shifted from the college auditorium to a high school gymnasium where 3,000 could be accommodated.

"Never Doubt Me" is title of LACY.

Britons wild in Ellington acclamation

By RON STEPHENSON for ANP

LONDON, ENGLAND—The eagerly anticipated visit to Britain of Duke Ellington and his orchestra, has been singularly successful.

Starting at London's Royal Festival Hall, and after a series of one night stands around the country culminating at the State Cinema in London, it has been a round of capacity houses all the way. Music lovers, both young and old, have flocked to hear the venerable maestro of jazz.

Other musicians, both English and visiting artists, have taken every opportunity to sit and worship at the feet of the fabulous character with the quiet voice and huge personality.

MEMBERS of the Royal Family join everybody in Britain in their acclamation of the Ellington unit.

The credit is not all the Duke's. The individual members of the band whose names are household words in Britain, have lived up to their reputations to the extent that some people even say that the Duke could write and these boys could play even if he wasn't around.

The visit has been all too short, but will be one of the most treasured memories of those who have privileged to savour the quality of such sweet sound.

Kitt star kitten at 'Command' show

LONDON — The Royal Command show at the London Palladium last Monday night, might possibly have fallen flat on its face had it not been for the presence of Eartha Kitt in the lineup of talent.

Eartha was easily the most warmly received of the artists on the program.

Although she did only two numbers, Miss Kitt was the only performer able to penetrate the audience reserve and receive an encore. Later, she and Pat Boone, who occupied top billing with her in the performance proper, were presented to Queen Elizabeth.

Others received by the Queen at the same time included Frank Sinatra, Danny Kaye and Curt Jurgens.

BOONE'S performance on the bill was the victim of a starchy reception, needing a younger audience to achieve his effort.

Among 20 newcomers, the major click was by Roy Castle. Other top items included Antonio and his dancers along with excerpts from "Merry Widow" and "My Fair Lady."

THE 12 - YEAR - OLD pattern of Royal patronage of show business was temporarily ended last week when Queen, having bowed out of the annual Royal Command gala, attended a charity preem of "Me and the Colonel."

However, the Monarchy gave its usual backing for the annual vaudeville show in aid of the Variety Artists Benevolent Fund.

High Court grants new trial for Ill. Communist

CHICAGO—Claude M. Lightfoot, 49, chairman of the Communist Party in Illinois, will be retried in March on a charge of violating the Smith Act, in an earlier trial, he was sentenced to five years in prison and fined $5,000.

The Supreme Court ordered the new trial because Mr. Lightfoot's attorneys were denied access to FBI reports.

L.A. radio station names Morgan grad to exec post

LOS ANGELES, Cal. — Tom B. Hawkins, a native Baltimorean and graduate of Morgan State College, was recently named director of public relations for radio station KGFJ of this city.

Ten years ago, the station, which is located in Hollywood, became the first radio outlet in the nation to broadcast only a 24 - hour schedule.

On September, 1, KGFJ became the first station in Los Angeles, the nation's third largest market, to devote full time programming to colored clientele.

Hawkins, since that time, has been appointed public relations director by Thelma Churchner, general manager of the station.

Max Roach to drum at Va. State Friday

PETERSBURG, Va.—Drummer Max Roach will appear in concert at Virginia State College on Friday evening, at 8 o'clock in Virginia Hall Auditorium.

The concert is sponsored by the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Beta Gamma Chapter.

When just 20, in 1944, Max Roach was recording with Dizzy Gillespie and others. Throughout the bop era he was the most-recorded, most sought after young drummer in the nation.

As modern jazz gained wider acceptance so, too, did the technique of Max Roach. First with trumpeter Clifford Brown and later alone with a group, Roach established himself in person and on records as one of the important talents of hi-fi jazz-ers.

Jackson College to stage 'Blithe Spirit'

JACKSON, Miss. — "Blithe Spirit," Noel Coward's smash comedy hit of the London and Broadway stages, will be seen at Jackson State College, Friday in Dansby Hall Auditorium.

To test law that bars Billie Holiday in N.Y.

NEW YORK — A suit which names Police Commissioner Stephen P. Kennedy as defendant, has been filed in the New York Supreme Court in an effort to determine the legality of a law requiring licenses for cabaret employees.

It is this police requirement that has prevented singer Billie Holiday from appearing in local night clubs for more than five years, Miss Holiday has been many times argued the unfairness of the regulation and filed numerous appeals for lifting of the ban.

MISS HOLIDAY contends that earlier arrests and convictions on narcotics counts have stood in the way of her reinstatement as a cabaret performer in this state. She has been permitted to appear at theatres, and last year filed a Carnegie Hall engagement, but has been barred from accepting jobs to entertain where drinks are sold.

The suit filed last week by three musicians challenges the legal right of the police department to require such licenses.

ONE OF the musician-plaintiffs— trombonist J. J. Johnson— filed an engagement in Baltimore last weekend. His reaction to the New York requirement is included in an AFRO interview to be found elsewhere on this page.

Johnson and Beril W. Rubenstein entered the Supreme Court action along with arranger Johnny Richards. The latter contends the allegations that the withholding of work permits by the police curtails his right to employ musicians of his own choice.

UNDER NEW YORK BAN—The right of the police to continue barring Billie Holiday from singing in New York nightclubs was challenged in a suit filed last week by three musicians, trombonist J. J. Johnson among them. Miss Holiday has been trying for eight years to be reinstated as a cafe performer following the lifting of her license on a narcotics conviction.

J. J.'s dander rises; plans to sue cops

By BAKER E. MORTEN

"If a man makes a mistake, he should pay for it the rest of his life? I don't think it's right. I feel we have a strong case against the New York City Police Department."

Jazz trombonist J. J. Johnson was bitter when he said that Wednesday night while filling an engagement along with drummer Max Roach at the Lucky Number Rose Room here.

He had reference to a suit to be filed by his attorney, Maxwell T. Cohen of New York, against the city's Cabaret Employee's Licensing Bureau, an agency which determines if a musician convicted of a crime may work there.

JOHNSON SAID his suit will challenge the validity of the police licensing rule.

J. J., a consistent poll winner for his trombone versatility in jazz, contends that as a result of the Cabaret Employees Licensing Bureau, some 5,000 national and local musicians have been unable to work in New York City.

He said the suit, a 44-page complaint being brought by himself, pianist Beril W. Rubenstein and bandleader Johnny Richards, will seek to abolish the rule. The petition is slated to be filed in New York Supreme Court this month, he said.

"The whole thing has to do with musicians once involved with narcotics, who have since gone straight. The regulation says that a musician convicted of a crime must go before the licensing bureau and be judged as to his present fitness to work.

"IF IN the opinion of the bureau, a musician is fit, he may be granted a permit to work in established night clubs.

"The musician is charged two dollars for the permit to work. This money is placed in the Police Pension Fund," Johnson told the AFRO.

He charges in his suit that the New York Police Department has illegally collected over $500,000 in fees for the Police Pension Fund.

"BECAUSE OF preconceived and mistaken notions about musicians who have once made a mistake, they are denied permits or their work permits restricting employment to one club for a short duration.

"Because of this discriminatory practice, they are many musicians in New York City who have been offered jobs but cannot take them," the noted jazz trombonist asserted, adding:

"My lawyer has combed the city statute books and can't find a regulation anywhere giving the bureau the right to charge musicians $2 for work permits.

"It's absolutely unfair for a musician trying to go straight to be subjected to sugh treatment. New York is a mecca for musicians. If they can't work there, where can they work?

"IT ALL boils down to musicians being denied the right to work because of a past mistake."

J. J., who alternated his quintet with that of Max Roach during the evening of music, said many "big names" in jazz might be involved in the litigation. He declined to elaborate on names.

He explained that his prospective suit was gaining support among civic groups in New York.

Roach, who embarked upon a lighter vein of conversation, wanted it to be known that his present jazz aggregation is the possibly the youngest in jazz.

GEORGE COLEMAN on tenor sax, Art Davis on bass, Ray Draper on tuba and Booker Little on trumpet comprise the Roach clan.

Appearing with J. J.'s group was trumpeteer Nat Adderly, whose drive combined with that of the group was hard, but smooth.

Roach was all arms on drums, proving delightfully why he is perhaps the nation's number one jazz drummer.

J. J. was excitingly soulful in his approach, though he and Roach stayed with their separate groups and did not team up.

ASKED WHAT direction he thought jazz was headed toward next, Max quipped: "I hope it heads into the money."
