MRS. LORETTA TRUSTY, of Philadelphia, adores her grandchildren: Anthony Moore, being held by her; David Moore, 3, Larry Bell, 7; and Richard Cosby, 2½ years.

Miss Stokes' cookery prize is U.S. version of Italian Pizza

When a pretty model makes a meal, you can be sure that the food is glamorous or highly interesting, that the preparation of it doesn't detract from her glamour and that it doesn't interfere, too much, with her time or her career.

Cardell Stokes's cooking is a good example.

Miss Stokes is with the Grace Del Marco Models of New York.

She has succumbed to that popular dish which has made its way across the ocean from Europe . . .that sizzling, gooey delight, the Pizza Pie.

HER RECIPE was picked up from the Carnation Milk company, whose economists have taken the best of the Italian Pizza and combined it with the American hamburger and come up with a delicious concoction called the Pizza Bunburger.

The secret of their goodness, Miss Stokes tells you, is the tomato sliced, Mozzarella cheese and oregano which give the meat mixture that certain dash. The milk keeps the meat mixture juicy and firm-textured, she says.

FOR HER Pizza Bunburgers (to serve six) Miss Stokes uses two-third cup of the undiluted milk, an egg, one and a half pounds of ground beef, a half cup fine cracker crumbs, one and a half teaspoons salt, a fourth teaspoon pepper, six hamburger buns, split in half, 12 slices tomato, 12 slices Mozarella cheese and three-fourth teaspoon oregano.

* * *

TO MAKE, combine the Carnation milk, egg, beef, cracker crumbs, salt and pepper. Blend together until well-mixed.

Form meat mixture into 12 thin patties, using about a third cup each. Place each patty on hamburger bun half, covering completely.

Place Bunburgers on broiler pan. Broil five to seven inches from heat for five to seven minutes, or to taste. Top each Bunburger with tomato and cheese slice. Sprinkle with oregano. Broil until cheese bubbles . . .about one or two minutes.

MISS CANDELL STOKES

EASY DOES IT ..... HELEN HALE

Eliminate fussy basting of appliques on dresses by setting them in place with cellophane tape. This will work on all materials except cutple types where loosely woven threads might pull out when you remove tape.

If pastry boards tend to slide on a smooth table surface, place a wet dishcloth or towel underneath them.

A large electric roaster will take care of baking a ham and a pan of baked beans. After baking, turn the unit down low to keep the foods warm until serving time.

Tedious hand-blocking of doilies can be eliminated if you dunk them in a thick starch and stretch them out on a smooth surface like a table or mirror.

If you can't keep keys where they belong, hang a handled bread board in the kitchen with enough cup hooks on it to take care of all the keys in the home.

Houseplants in pots often get moldy around the rim of the pot as a result of various chemicals. Remove plant and soil from the pot and line the pot with foil, then repot with fresh soil.

Before applying paint to calciamined walls, make certain they are washed off thoroughly with a brush and a solution of salsoda and water or the new paint will flake and peel.

GLAMOROUS GRANDMOTHERS

Mrs. Trusty, grandma of five, student of fashion designing

By KATHERINE COOPER

PHILADELPHIA — As chaperone at a YWCA masquerade ball given by a young sorority group Mrs. Loretta Trusty, young attractive grandmother of five, was busily engaged in manning the soft drink concession.

During a lull in "business" she told us a little about herself and a lot about her five grandchildren: Larry Bell, 7, son of Mrs. Elaine Bell; two grandsons, Tony, 2, and David (Muscles) Moore, 3, children of Mrs. Barbara Moore; and Rickey, 2, and Ronnie, nine months, children of Mrs. Bernice Cosby. Her three daughters are housewives.

* * *

MRS. TRUSTY is employed by a clothing manufacturer and she helps to create the famous Jantzen sweaters. After work, one day a week, she attends a fashion designing school because she says, "it always pays to be prepared."

Two and one-half hours a day spent on pattern drafting, which she is learning at home, about two hours a day of piano practice, doesn't leave her much time for other interests, but she does manage to spend some time swimming, which she learned to do as a child, and in summer, to play tennis. She also likes the theatre—especially musicals, light operas, ballets.

* * *

NO CONSISTENT TV viewer Mrs. Trusty does like documentaries such as "Bold Journey" and "See it Now."

"Since there seems to be such a need for educational and informative TV shows, I'm often puzzled as to why there are not more of these kinds of shows on the air," she said.

"Of course, we don't know the real reasons why we are given the very light TV fare or the terrible westerns" —

"you just can't put your finger on why there are not more realistic and down-to-earth TV programs — but I can see that TV has a great potential for doing a good job in educating and informing us viewers. Perhaps we should keep letters coming in telling them what shows we like and why —and those we don't like and why. Maybe enough of us aren't letting them know just what we want."

In answer to a comment on her interest in so many things, Mrs. Trusty replied, "I like to know what is going on around me. I like to read, to listen, and then to form my own opinions."

* * *

MRS. TRUSTY spoke of the Youth March On Washington, which had taken place on the day of the interview — "I think it will be very effective," she said. "It shows that as you lead a child, hand in hand, so he will grow up side by side with children of all nationalities."

"You know the saying, 'the show must go on'—well, time must go on — and it's time to leave the prehistoric ways of the past, with man against man, and work together for a future where all men are brothers — for all mankind has the same needs, desires, aspirations. So, for my grandchildren I just want them to grow up happy, with full and equal opportunities, in a world at peace."

Mrs. Trusty lives at 308 E. Rittenhouse Street, Philadelphia, with her husband, Calvin Trusty. She is a member of St. Vincents Catholic Church in Germantown.

FOR JUNIOR FIGURES

In this sensational party model, Lachasse makes the most of petite measurements by darting the waist and rounding the bust with a high curve. A contrasting band encircles the wide shaped neckline with its low back scoop.

Repeating this trim, a loose-edge bias band tops the gathers, then falls free to sweep low over the skirt fullness and be caught in novelty buttons. Especially suited to dress-up evenings, make this in novelty cottons, shantung, plain or printed rayons and silks, taffeta, satin, peau de soie.

From this chart select the one size best for you.

COOKING IS FUN

Ten to one you'll get the bird to keep Thanksgiving tradition

By FANNIEJOE REID

No matter how modern has become your state of mind about cooking, turkey, and, I think, will remain, the star of the Thanksgiving dinner.

So, you can just let your modernity turn to new ways of cooking the bird and innovations in the stuffing.

This Thanksgiving I am planning to use an oyster stuffing, and a garnish of sausage links.

I think you will like both the taste and the appearance of your main feature if you try this, too.

FOR THE oyster stuffing I use a quart of large soft bread crumbs, a half pint oysters, a third cup chopped onion, a pint of poultry fat, a tablespoon chopped parsley, a half tablespoon chopped onion, a pinch of savory seasoning, a pinch of celery seed, and pepper to taste.

Heat the oysters gently in their own liquid a few minutes. Drain and reserve liquor. Heat one-half cup of poultry fat in a frying pan, cook a few minutes. Mix all lightly together.

You will need twice this amount for a 10-pound turkey.

First, get your turkey. This recipe is for a 10-16 pound turkey, salt and pepper, the oyster stuffing, a half-pound margarine, two pounds of link sausage.

Rub the turkey inside with salt and pepper.

Loosen skin from breast with fingers. Stuff neck cavity, spreading uniformly. Fill body cavity loosely. Truss.

Place turkey, breast side up, in open pan. Roast uncovered in slow oven (250 to 325 F.). Melt margarine and add a half cup hot water. Baste turkey with this at 30-minute intervals.

When breast and legs are light brown, cover with cloth dipped in margarine mixture. Roast 20 to 25 minutes per pound.

About 10 minutes before turkey is done, place sausages, still linked, in frying pan. Add two tbsps. water, cover and simmer 12-15 minutes.

Remove cover and brown. Drain. Make a large "nest" of sausage on platter. Center turkey in this with parsley and cold spiced pears.

This serves 12.

FROM A VERY OLD file I am taking the recipe for baked squash, for my dinner, to have pressing equipment at uniform temperature and to use the same care in curing the finish, this is not a job that can be done at home.

The finish will not last the life of the garment, but cost studies indicate it should be inexpensive enough to justify renewal.

Select hard - shelled, well-shaped squash and cut in halves. Put halves together again and bake in slow oven until tender.

Remove from oven, scrape from shells, mash, add a good sized piece of butter, a tablespoon of sugar, and set in the oven to get very hot. Place back in shells and serve.

For my note of green I plan to use peas . . .frozen ones, dressed with a dash of salt, sugar, white pepper, butter and sour cream. Slivers of toasted almond will enhance the flavor.

Of my three accessories: onion-soup, tossed salad, cranberry sauce and pumpkin pie, the soup and sauce will come out of cans (perked up with a dash of sherry) and the pie from the freezer. For this cook intends to also enjoy the dinner.

* * *

I THINK I will use stubby orange colored candles in silver holders (center) with low trims on each end of my table. I'll find as crooked ears of corn (two) and the most perfect ears (two) for place (two) to place at the outer base of the flowers.

And we'll have coffee and a brandy and sighs of contentment (I hope) in the living room at the end of the meal.

WOMAN'S WORLD

Wars, depressions serve to increase female labor force

By the NNPA News Service

Just as the depression years of the 1930's strengthened employment policies favoring the man with a family to support over the married woman worker, so manpower needs during World War I and, more particularly, World War II, made the recruitment of women workers necessary if the nation was to meet its war production goals.

World War II not only saw an explosive and unprecedented expansion of female labor force, but it also influenced the future character of women's employment.

* * *

THE FEMALE labor force increased from 14,000,000 in 1940 to a peak of 20,000,000 in 1945.

World War II demonstrated the importance of wives and mothers as a manpower reserve.

When the war began, less than one tenth of the mothers in the country were working.

When it ended, one fifth of the mothers whose children were 18 or younger, and one eighth of the mothers whose children were under six, were in the labor force.

World War II also witnessed the entrance of women into jobs formerly reserved for men.

THE OPENING of special training programs to women, the establishment of publicly supported as well as private facilities to provide care for the children of working mothers, and the enlistment of some women of the fields women entered during World War II.

Wartime experiences challenged employers to examine their traditional ways of utilizing women workers. Preconception about what women could and could not do received little confirmation, and difficulteis expected to arise with mixed work forces frequently did not arise.

* * *

IN LABOR unions, too, traditional fears were allayed as the influx of women workers did not result in lowering union wage rates and working conditions, and as hundreds of thousands of women became union members.

The wartime experience of women workers encouraged more positive attitudes toward work outside the home, and many of them looked forward to remaining in the labor force after the war.

The successful utilization of women in uniform laid the basis for integrating the women's services into the regular military establishment on a permanent basis in 1948.

Be sure to be well-heeled when looking for a new job

There's probably no time when it's more important to be well-heeled than when you're looking for a job.

And that phrase, "well-heeled," should be taken literally. Not that most employers make a systematic check of your appearance from head to toe, but they do get an over-all impression.

The first rule for the well-shod job-hunter is: Don't wear shoes that are too sexy. Heels built like the stem of a champagne glass and a fashionable short skirt are a combination that is appealing to a man in many occasions, but it makes a prospective employer nervous.

On the other hand, of course, you wouldn't wear flats to an office. A one-to two-inch heel with a fashionable curve is your best choice. Out of order along with high heels are open toes, big bows, flowers and rhinestone trim. They're too frivolous.

As for what is right — well, don't try to skimp on the shoes you wear job-hunting. There is nothing that shows good taste more than the unobtrusive elegance of a really fine pair of leather pumps with slim leather soles. They are one of the best investments you can make for they will add distinction to your appearance not only while you are job hunting but after you are on the job.

As for color, they can be black of course. But they can also be a new color that is unobtrusive but different look-ing and particularly smart with your costume: russet, ginger or one of the new subtle greens, for instance.

There are a wide variety of leathers for you to choose from, including the new matte calf, polished calf, glace kid, a thick-napped suede called "mohair" for wear with a mohair suit or coat, and suede with a finer nap to go with fine-textured wool.

Little Foxes score in Detroit Fashion Folio

DETROIT, Mich.—The fashion show scene was advanced 25 years recently when the Shutterbug Group (Michigan's most active camera club) presented "The Little Foxes Fashion Folio" here, recently.

The show, adequately called the "fashion extravaganza that had everything" was primarily a competitive modeling event with models from eight cities vying for the "Model-of-the-Year" trophy and $100 cash award.

The affair was held in the new Henry and Edsel Ford Auditorium in the Detroit River front of the Motor City. There were four competitive fashion scenes, each featuring attire daytime—street, cocktail and ball gowns.

* * *

INTERSPERSING these fashion scenes was varied entertainment including Blossom Hutchin, female vocalist who was typically the supper club chanteuse singing Gershwin songs in French with a wonderfully continental flavor; Vera Embree and company featuring ballet in the jazz idiom and beautifully so; a simulated "chorus line" of 24 bouffant - gowned "new faces" whose pictorial patterns were effective replacements for the customary dancing expected of such a line.

Twelve "Pin-up" models whose shapely lithe figures were costumed elegantly in varying colored leotards sprinkled with star dust; Gene Bolden, male singer of the ballad "September Song" backed by the precision patterns of the line of 24 girls was most effective; and, finally, 10 amazing young men called "The Esquire Club" of Columbus, Ohio, who were a combination of satorial flair plus rhythm beat and uniformity of movement of Radio City's Rockettes.

* * *

CLIMAXING THE SHOW in the finale was one complete section of the back stage which rose up to stage level carrying the bevy of "Pin - up" models posed prettily, replete with bejumed headgear. Following the intermission in the downstairs social room, the patrons enjoyed a "20-minute wordless fashion scene" featuring designs by Detroit designers worn by local models who paraded continuously during the entire refreshment break.

"Miss Ket. Louis" (Climer Nelson Taylor) was judged the "model - of - the - year," "Miss Atlanta, Ga."i (Maxine Bradley); "Miss Chicago, Ill." (Sara Tarpley); "Miss Cleveland, O." (Eve Jones); "Miss Columbus, O." (Joice Brown); "Miss Milwaukee, Wis." (Vada Moss); "Miss Philadelphia, Pa." (Marjorie Murphy); and "Miss Washington, D.C." (Thelma Elmore) were runners -up.

The judges were Mrs. Toni M. Lewis, dance instuctor; Miss Olga Godbee, a major in clothing at Wayne University; Robert Kates, promoter at John Robert Powers Agency; and Mr. and Mrs. Morton Sobel, representing the laymen. Fashion commentary was executed by Lynnette Taylor.

The "Little Foxes" model movement was inaugurated by the Shutterbug Group last summer when it presenced the first models' convention called "The Meeting of the Little Foxes."

Science Finds New Healing Substance That Promptly Stops Itching and Pain of Piles

New York, N. Y. (Special) — One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "itching piles". It is not only embarrassing for the victim during the day and especially aggravating at night.

No matter what you've used without results — here's good news. For the first time, science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to promptly stop the burning itch and pain. It actually shrinks hemorrhoids — without surgery. Medical science has proved this substance produces a remarkably effective rate of healing. Its germ-killing properties also help prevent infection.

In one hemorrhoid case after another "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations. This improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of months! Among these sufferers were a wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, some of 10 to 20 years' duration.

The secret is this new healing substance (Bio-Dyne®) — discovery of a world-famous research institution.
