A 19-year-old Anne Arundel county youth who was shot in the left leg after he allegedly resisted arrest Tuesday will be charged with disorderly conduct.

The boy will be given a hearing in the Southern District police court following his release from South Baltimore General Hospital, probably next week.

The shooting which involved a tan Southern District patrolman occurred in a wooded area near the 200 block of Bridgeview Rd. in Cherry Hill.

PATROLMAN Melvin Freeman reported that he attempted to arrest the youth after he overheard a group of boys using profanity and cursing police officers in general.

He stated that enroute to a squad car the boy broke away and tried to grab his revolver.

When arrested a second time the youth was placed inside the car but broke away again the officer said.

Beatty named to head UNCF drive

NEW YORK — W. Barton Beatty Jr., head of the United Negro College Fund's Cleveland - Pittsburgh region since 1955, has been named national campaign director, it was announced here today by W. J. Trent Jr., Fund executive director.

A club with a mission— the spread of modern jazz

The sharp clear tone of a saxophone lashes out like a whip, cutting through the soft undercurrent of muted conversation, gently, much like a surgeon with a scapel, working around the theme but never quite touching it.

A trumpet growls and groans and then spits forth a dazzling cascade of notes, crazy but wonderfully strange notes that are answered by the steady beat of a bass fiddle.

At one end of the long bar a drinker keeps time by slapping his hand against the side of a glass. He leaves the world behind as the music rolls easily, like waves beating against a shore, splashing the listeners in the sound.

* * *

THIS IS Jazz Unlimited in action—a group of musicians gathered for the express purpose of playing modern jazz—and no rock and roll mind you, no rock and roll.

Strange tunes with strange titles but this is modern jazz—music that has come of age.

Listen to Phill Harris, president of the group, explain what Jazz Unlimited is all about:

"It serves as an outlet for musicians who have something to say in modern jazz."

To that end there is a regular Saturday concert at an Avenue night club.

"It gives composers and arrangers a chance to get their compositions heard by the public."

There you have the reason for some of the unfamiliar pieces, for if they are ever to become familiar they have to be heard.

Producing music that no one ever hears is perhaps the most frustrating fate that can befall a composer, but Jazz Unlimited wants to keep the flow of material coming for modern music, according to its practitioners, is a virgin field in which to work.

"It serves as a training ground for youngsters who have the desire to go into the field."

For every Charlie Parker, Stan Getz, Dave Brubeck, Miles Davis, there are a hundred young musicians burning with ambition but with no place to play.

Give them a bandstand and somebody to listen and perhaps they will develop into capable artists to help the cause of modern jazz, is the way Jazz Unlimited feels.

* * *

STARTED LAST fall, Jazz Unlimited now has 33 members, all completely sold on the future of modern jazz.

Mr. Harris is the president; Stanley (Mousie) Johnson, vice-president; Ruby Glover, secretary and the only female in the group; James Jefferson, treasurer, and Reppert Stone, business manager.

With its own clubhouse and several successful concerts behind it, Jazz Unlimited is determined to stay in business.

And for those who might not understand what modern jazz is trying to say, here is the advice of the club's president:

"You first of all must learn to listen so that you can listen to learn." J.D.W.

Musical Moments

By ADAH K. JENKINS

Last Saturday's Mondawmin "Starlight Pop Concert" was highlighted by the appearance of the Deborah London Corps de Ballet and the local premiere performance of Richard Bales' "National Gallery Suite" No. 3 conducted by the composer.

Ballet, which was once favored by a very select group, has become highly popular, largely through the television and the large number of dancing "classes" or studios prevalent in every city.

In addition to the "classic" ballet, with toe dancing and the traditional positions, there is great interest in the modern ballet.

The latter combines the classic techniques with highly creative and imaginative choreography (planning of the dance) also including elements of pantomime.

There is much programming of national and folk dances, which offer a rich opportunity for the modern ballet.

* * *

THE FIRST offering by the Deborah London Ballet Saturday evening was the "Cleopatra" Dance from the opera "Faust" by Gounod.

Anna Marie Moylon, who has studied for ten years with Miss London, possesses the physical attributes and a maturity of expression that can well take her to the ranks of a ballerina.

The classic ballet was represented by the Grand Waltz "Swan Lake" by Tschikowsky. It is exquisite music and the dancers matched it from the moment they whirled down the winding steps of the Mondawmin Mall in their rainbow-hued costumes, shot with brilliants.

"Tennessee Hoe Down" was in the folk tradition, lively and robust, with a vivid suggestion of the country dance.

The final offering, "Slavonic Dance" No. 1 by the Bohemian composer, Anton Dvorak, displayed strong influence of the national trend in ballet.

Myron Madel, as soloist, delighted the enthusiastic audience with brilliant leaps and vigorous humor. The music for the Tennessee dance was composed by Margarette Romeike a graduate of Juilliard School of Music.

The work was written and orchestrated especially for the Starlight Pop Concert. Choreography was done by Miss London and Jack Potteiger. The corps de ballet is intercultural.

* * *

MR. BALES' "National Gallery Suite" was inspired by eight watercolors hung in the National Gallery (Washington, D.C.) in 1957. Each section of the suite is based on "old American ballads, folks songs or instrumental dances."

There were such intriguing as "Angel Gabriel Weathervane," "Cigar-Store Indian" and "Baseball Player," with themes from actual baseball music of the '69's and '70's.

It is lusty, folksy music, with whistles, cow - bells, snare drums, sleigh bells and an imitation of the bazooka, and early American instrument. The orchestra entered into the hearty spirit of the work, following Mr. Bales' decisive direction.

The balance of the concert was conducted by Edmund Cooke and consisted mainly of admirable presentations of famous ballet music by the French writers, Delibes and Massanet.

In France the ballet was highly favored, both in the opera and as a separate concert performance. "The Pizzicato Polka" and "Valse Lente (Slow)" from the Ballet Suite "Sylvia" are gracious and sophisticated in typical French tradition.

The Ballet Suite "Le Cid" (The Sultan) included "Analouse" and the well know "Argonaise," that is played by every aspiring young pianist. Both have a flavor of the Oriental in their orchestration.

The final "Starlight Pop Concert" will take place Saturday, August 9, and is entitled "Around the World With Music."

CALENDAR: Friday, Aug. 8 at 8 p.m. at School 135, Chase and McDonough St., the Municipal Concert Band.

Sunday, Aug. 10 at Druid Hill Park, Grove A, the Park Concert Band in the final concert of the 1958 Summer Season.

Saturday, August 9 the final Starlight Pop Concert of the season at Mondawmin, entitled "Around the World with Music. Edwood Gary, tenor, will be the soloist and the 40-piece orchestra, recruited from the Baltimore Symphony, will be conducted by Edmund Cooke.

Tuesday, Aug. 12 the Rose Garden at the Baltimore Museum, Wyman Park Drive, near 31st St., the final concert of summer programs with Levin and McGraw, duo-pianists. Tickets are available at the Museum. In case of rain the concert will be given in the Museum auditorium.
