assembly and told them that for the first time we were having colored students," Miss Mattingly said.

"I told them I had met the children and their parents. And that the children seemed well-behaved.

"And we want them to profit by what this school had to offer and we want them to get along."

Miss Mattingly, who has been principal of the school for over 25 years, said further:

"I think things went along well, as I expected them to be."

"I think today is the most difficult day.

"But at least we are doing it (integrating) and not just talking about it."

Miss Mattingly is sister of Senator Joseph A. Mattingly, from St. Marys County.

MRS. REBECCA GROVES, mother of the children, said after they had returned home, "I am so relieved—I must admit I was very nervous.

"I am glad newsmen were around to keep an eye on things.

"But I have schooled them to expect name calling.

"Still I don't want anybody hitting them."

Said William Groves, the father:

"It came out as I expected, and I am glad it came out this way.

"We live in a nice community with very nice people.

"I am sure they will rise to help protect the community from any unpleasant incidents."

AND SO it went this first day of school integration in St. Marys County.

A beautiful, sunny, cherry day with two clouds in the sky—and two clouds in the day of the Groves children.

Jane, an attractive young girl, who stands 5' 2" and weighs 112 pounds, was neatly dressed for the occasion in a black linen blouse, red linen skirt, beige shoes and a gold anklet—a birthday present.

Conrad, a handsome youngster, who stands 3' 10", slight of build, wore a blue sport jacket, blue pants, blue buckskin shoes, white shirt and a blue tie.

JOAN AND CONRAD left their home at 8:25 Thursday morning in a segregated bus which carried them four miles to the George Washington Carver High School in Jarboesville.

At the Carver school they were picked in another segregated bus and carried as the only passengers to the Great Mills School.

In commenting on the admission of the children Miss Mattingly said:

"The Great Mills Jr. and Sr. High School has an enrollment of 6,700 children and contains a combination gym and auditorium, cafeteria, chemistry lab, severeral work shops and 25 classrooms.

Miss Mattingly said:

"There will be no special provisions made in the cafeteria in so far as separate tables or service are concerned for the Groves children."

Miss Mattingly had this to say about community feeling on the acceptance of the children:

"Generally, the parents have been silent.

"I received no comments one way or the other."

Joan Groves enrolled as a senior.

She will have the subjects of English, American history, shorthand and bookkeeping.

Conrad enrolled in the 9th grade.

Both transferred from the Cardinal Gibbons Parochial High School.

MR. GROVES requested the transfer in order that Joan might get subjects towards a commercial diploma which were not available at the Cardinal Gibbons High School and that his children might have the benefit of better advantages in integrated schooling.

Mr. Groves had this to say about the County School Board:

"I think we have a good school board, and I think they are trying to do a good job.

"The whole thing is that they have customs here and custom is their enemy."

MEANWHILE, St. Marys school officials have filed an appeal from the order issued by Federal Judge Roszel C. Thomsen, admitting Joan.

An attempt was made by attorneys for the board to have the order admitting Joan delayed pending the appeal but Chief Judge Simon E. Sobeloff of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit turned this plea down Tuesday.

In denying the request, Judge Sobeloff said:

"It is sufficient for present purposes to say, without further elaboration, that after hearing counsel for the parties at length, examining the court file and weighing all pertinent considerations, I think that no sufficient showing has been made by the defendants to warrant interference with the district Judge's carefully considered refusal to suspend the order pending appeal."

The petition did not disturb Joan who was expected to school officials, was evidenced by the sufficient showing has been fact that no policemen, State or otherwise were stationed at the school.

A state trooper drove past the students were in the school. Later a patrol car, manned by some police drove past. Neither one stopped.

ed unless otherwise ordered by the Placement Board.

Spottswood W. Robinson III, argued that the 30 colored applicants for transfer were treated differently because of racial consideration and that the denial of their applications violated the 14th Amendment.

His argument was directed specifically at two of the criteria the school board used in rejecting the applications — psychological problems and the alleged lack of ability of five of the applicants to adapt themselves in white schools.

Robert Reeves attacked the so-called disqualification on the basis of attendance areas and overcrowding at Washington and Lee, a white high school.

Oliver W. Hill argued that the applicants were academically qualified to be transferred to the white schools to which they had applied.

Mr. Robinson disputed the opinion to transfer two pupils to white schools because they would meet with "severe difficulties."

"If all the things that presented difficulties at Central High School in Little Rock were not sufficient from the viewpoint of the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals) to grant even a temporary suspension of constitutional rights," Mr. Robinson said, "this so-called severe difficulties in the school in which the application was made by these two little children certainly could not justify the taking away of their rights to a non-segregated education permanently."

Before court recessed late Wednesday afternoon, Harry A. Walker professor of sociology at Howard University, testified that "Arlington, with its per capita wealth, higher level of education and low percentage of colored people, could have desegregated much easier than Washington.

The Arlington school board, meeting in the federal court room Tuesday, postponed the opening of Arlington's public schools from Sept. 4 to 8 to give Judge Bryan opportunity to render his decision for the opening.

ATTORNEY GENERAL Bertis Harrison of Virginia told Federal District Judge Sterling Hutcheson Tuesday that Virginia regarded the case of 30 colored students seeking admission to Arlington County public schools as equally im-

First school suit filed in Richmond

RICHMOND

Desegregation suits were filed late Tuesday against the Richmond city school board.

It marked the first legal action taken against Richmond, former capital of the Confederacy, in seven years of school litigation.

The NAACP asked Federal Judge Sterling Hutcheson to restrain the Richmond School Board from denying admission of six colored children to white schools.

Though filed in behalf of the six pupils, it was a class action, aimed at benefitting all pupils similarly situated.

THE SUITS were filed for three children seeking admission to Nathaniel Bacon Elementary School in Church Hill and three seeking to enter Westhampton Elementary School.

The NAACP filed the suits shortly after the Virginia Pupil Placement Board turned down applications from pupils.

The plaintiffs are Lorna E. Warden, Daisy Jane Cooper, Wanda I. Dilney, Onslow Minnis Jr., Sylvester Smith Jr., and Jerome Smith, and their parents, Leonard R. Warden Jr., Mrs. Elizabeth Cooper, Ernest A. Dabney, Onslow Minnis and Sylvester B. Smith.

GOVERNOR ALMOND announced Tuesday that School closing plans are being prepared for use in localities facing Federal Court orders to desegregate public schools.

He described the forms as "simple formal blanks to be filled in" and sent to local officials advising them that certain schools are not to open, or if open, are to be closed.

The governor said the forms were not required by the law but be considered it advisable to use them.

Raleigh boy, 14, loses school bid

ATLANTA—Joseph H. Hall Jr., 14-year-old Raleigh N.C., lad was denied the right to attend the school nearest his home by a U.S. District Judge on Monday.

Judge Edwin M. Stanley, in denying the youth admission to Needham B. Broughton High School declared that lawyers for the youth had not exhausted all legal state procedures.

Broughton High School is two miles closer to Holt's home than the school which he has to attend.

Limited integration already has begun in Charlotte, Greensboro and Winston-Salem. Some 13 colored children have been accepted for schools in these cities for the fall term.

of the major denominational ministers in Little Rock," he added.

"The largest group of all, they men were neither active in the crisis, nor particularly influential among the ministers."

DR. PETTIGREW told delegates how the pushers suffered abuse and demotion for their beliefs and actions."

They helped to organize an interracial ministers' association which issued proclamations against mob violence, he said.

"Some of the pushers later demanded membership withdrawal of those who participated in mob violence," he stated.

Pushers used pulpit and press "to remind their parishioners of the moral imperatives of the situation," Dr. Pettigrew said.

"LIKE MANY courageous religious leaders before them, they have suffered abuse and demotion for their beliefs and actions," he stated.

"Three of the eight pushers have already lost their Little Rock positions and a fourth is expecting removal soon."

"The majority of the major denominational ministers personally favor racial integration, but most have remained silent on class, small sect pastors.

He said that the only religious support for segregation in Little Rock "comes from work-ers throughout the community's crisis."

Most Little Rock ministers are Southern born, reared and educated in the South, he stated.

PUSHERS' CHURCHES are age about 400 members each; passives, 1,200. white power-ers serve around 2,800 each.

"I've spent 11 years of my life building up this magnificent church, and as its leader and administrator I'm not about to destroy it in this crisis." a power told the interviewers.

A passive said, "I'm about to retire, soon, and I haven't lived around here long. I know integration is coming, but I don't think I should stick my neck out now."

MEDIAN AGE of powers is 50, passives, 35, and pushers, 36.

"The importance of these pushers' courageous actions is difficult to overestimate," Dr. Pettigrew said, referring to the individual and collective conscience of Little Rock.

He quoted English poet William Blake, who said, "All that is required for evil to triumph is that good men do nothing."

DR. PETTIGRTW told a press conference that "The Little Rock Nine" received "tremendous support" from the colored community, whose backing was a source of comfort and inspiration.

If the Supreme Court orders the children back to school this fall and Governor Faubus closes Central High, this action may prove a boon to desegregation, he said.

"The question will then become education and not integration versus segregation," Dr. Pettigrew said. Parents prefer integrated schools to none at all.

Dr. Pettigrew referred to him self as "an optimist."

The Supreme Court is scheduled to hear the Little Rock case in another extraordinary session on Sept. 11.

PUPIL-B, he testified, was in the seventh grade last year and scored 7.2 on the achievement test. Dr. Henderson testified. This was the exact average score. Her I.Q., he said, ranged from 97 to 128 with 112 as the most recent. This student, he testified, would be much higher than the average student.

This student also had good marks last year. He said he found no valid reason for denying this child admission to the school to which she applied in the grade to which she was promoted.

Pupil No. 22 was tested in November, 1956, while in the fifth grade. The average score was 5.2. She made 3.0. "That difference is inconsequential," he testified.

He added that her I.Q. ranged from 94 to 99. Last year her teacher reported that she was an grade level in all areas, he added.

"She is quite well prepared to become an average student in any school in the grade to which she was promoted," Dr. Henderson said.

He testified that he found no reason for rejecting Pupil 22 on the basis of her academic accomplishment.

DR. JOY had testified earlier that the school board, in rejecting the applications for transfers, had considered the applicants in the various categories used in the cases of 12 of the applicants.

Denying these applicants in to two groups, he said he found no evidence in the records he examined of either psychological disability or lack of adaptability in new situations in the first group of seven applicants.

In the records of those placed in the first group he said, he found such statements under the heading of "social adjustment" made by teachers as "good" "has made nice adjustment," "shows a desire to do well at present day happenings," "making good progress in all areas of work," "very nice and sweet person."

IN THE CASE of Pupil No. 8 Dr. Mill of the Virginia State Department of Mental Hygiene concluded that the "Evidence is of instability in the record and indicates that it would be unwise and possibly harmful to subject this child to pressures in attending a school of a different race."

Dr. Bayton said statements made by this child's record were to the effect in January, 1958, that "There has been a noticeable change in attitude to the classroom work, courteous," and in June "Free and cooperative, eager to learn."

Spottswood Robinson, 5d, NAACP attorney, asked Dr. Bayton if he had found these cases evidence of any psychological difficulty or any inability to adapt of such a character as in his professional opinion would prevent the child from entering a school or adapting in a school previously attended by only whites.

Dr. Bayton reply that the opposite was shown —that they have a high degree of orientation in terms.

THE CASE was before Judge Bryan for ruling on the motion filed by the NAACP for further relief in the case in which last year he ordered the admission of seven colored children to four different schools in Arlington County.

He also had before him the report and request for guidance filed today by the Arlington County School Board.

School officials insisted in their testimony that color of race had nothing to do with rejection of their applications for transfers.

Superintendent Reid testified for the school board on the question of lack of adaptability as a factor for rejecting the applications.

UNDER CROSS examination by Frank D. Reeves, NAACP lawyer, Reid admitted he worked in a segregated system however, that he had never had as few as 30 pupils in any one class in the population of the Arlington schools, disclosed that chemistry and physics are offered at Hoffman-Boston on alternate years instead of every year as in the two white high schools.

DR. BAYTON, the other NAACP expert witness, has an A.B. and a B.S. degree from Howard; studied at Columbia and has a doctor of philosophy degree from the University of Pennsylvania.

He is a member of the American Psychological Association, a Phi Beta Kappa, has written about 30 articles for professional journals and has produced about 50 research projects for the Government and private enterprises.

He testified with respect to two categories used by the school board in rejecting the 30 applicants —psychological problems and inability to adapt to new situations. These two FACTORS ADVANCED as justifying the rejection of the applications, Mr. Reid testified, fell into five different categories.

He defined them as:

(1) Low problems relating to school attendance areas.

(2) overcrowding at Washington-Lee and the two white high schools in the county.

(3) low academic accomplishments of the colored applicants.

(4). psychological problems of the applicants, and

(5) lack of ability to adapt to new situations.

None of the applicants was identified by name. They were placed in these categories by a letter of the alphabet or by numbers.

AFTER THE Arlington County School Board had put in its testimony to support the rejections, the NAACP lawyers called Dr. Henderson.

He has a bachelor of science degree from Virginia Union, a master of arts and a doctor of philosophy degree in education from the University of Chicago and is a member of various professional organizations, including the American Academy of Political and Social Sciences. He taught at Armstrong High School in Richmond, he said, from 1940 to 1950 going to Virginia Union in 1941. He qualified as an expert.

Under questioning by Oliver W. Hill of Richmond, one of the NAACP lawyers, Dr. Henderson said he is familiar in a general way with the California Achievement Tests.

The scores made by the colored applicants on this test was the basis of the rejection of some of them for low academic achievement.

The achievement tests, he testified, are no valid criteria for enrollment of a child in a school, but only help to determine what grade he should be placed in.

On the basis of his study of the accumulative folders of the 30 applicants, furnished by the lawyers for the Arlington school board, Dr. Henderson testified that he found no valid reason for denying them admission to the schools to which they had applied.

DR. HENDERSON said the child identified as No. 9 was in the seventh grade last September and at that time was given the California Achievement Test and scored 8.0.

He interpreted the score as meaning that this student was about a year ahead of the average student in the seventh grade. The folder showed that her I.Q. (intelligence quotient) ranged from 105 to 114, and she had good marks for the last school year.

"I would say she was certainly qualified to be transferred to any school in the next grade."

He found in her file "favorable comment" in general to

PUPIL-D was described by Dr. Henderson as having a "very nice personality."

Dr. Henderson said he found no reason for rejecting the application of Pupil-D on the basis of her academic accomplishment.

DR. BAYTON said he found no reason for rejecting the application of Pupil-D on the basis of her psychological problems.

Dr. Bayton said he found no reason for rejecting the application of Pupil-E on the basis of her psychological problems.

Pupil-E, he said, is a colored child in a white school, or vice versa.

The idea of forcing the close-ting of colored schools by the transfer of white children to colored schools was advanced by the Defenders of Individual Liberties and State Sovereignty, a segregationist group organized which has been active in Virginia.

Mr. Reid finally admitted that the standards were applied only in the cases of colored students applying for transfer to white schools.

HE SAID there were other bases for grouping of children than race, but he would not say that the Jewish faith was one, He said he could not see that Jewish religion had anything to do with the public schools.

Mr. Reid gave his professional opinion as no colored child can adapt himself in a previously all-white school unless he is specially gifted or superior.

"It is my professional opinion that it would be very difficult in many instances, impossible," he testified.

Dr. Joy preceded Mr. Reid to the stand. He said the evaluation of being one of two liberal members of the five-member Arlington school board, has nothing in his testimony showed his liberality.

He holds a doctorate in education from George Washington University and is an assistant professor and Administrator of the Agricultural Research Service department.

On the reason or another, he testified, the school board voted to reject all 30 applications for transfer.

If the school board were to have responsibility for assignment of pupils without regard to race, Dr. Joy testified, he recognized that the Hoffman-Boston school district could not be justified except on the basis of race.

The Hoffman-Boston school has two districts from which its children come — one in North Arlington and the other in South Arlington.

A. B. SCOTT, counsel for the Virginia Pupil Placement Board, argued before Judge Bryan that it was presumptuous for the United States Court of Appeals and for him (Judge Bryan) to say that that board would not properly administer the Virginia Pupil Placement law.

He urged that the placement functions discussed in the Virginia Pupil Placement Board has been properly made a part of the suit in which the validity of the pupil placement law can be determined.

Judge Bryan ruled in 1957 that the administrative name dies provided in the law were too unwieldy and prolix to provide an adequate remedy for persons appealing from an adverse decision of the board.

Seven colored children in September, 1957, presented themselves for admission to white schools in Arlington. Upon being rejected, they filed motions in the district court for an order directing that they be admitted into the schools to which they had applied for the 1957-58 school year.

THEIR MOTION was granted and the school board was enjoined from refusing to admit them upon presenting of themselves last Sept. 23, to the specific schools to which they had applied.

Judge Bryan stayed his order pending appeals. The order became final in April, 1958, when the Supreme Court refused to review the case.

After the court order of Sept. 14, 1957, the Virginia General Assembly in 1958, amended the Virginia Pupil law, which vested all authority to assign pupils in Virginia public schools in the State Pupil Placement Board.

In its report and request for guidance, the school board said, the court

1. IF THE order of Sept. 14, 1957, was limited to last school year.

2. Whether the applications of any of the seven pupils for admission to white schools for the 1958-59 school year was subject to review as to the propriety of the applications by either the Placement or school board.

The Pupil Placement Board passed upon the applications and rejected all of them.

Of the 30 applicants for transfer five of them were covered by the order of Sept. 14, 1957, and 25 are new applicants.

Associated with Mr. Hill, Mr. Oliver and Mr. Reeves in the case are Otto L. Tucker of Alexandria and Charles Quick and James M. Nabrit, 3d, of Washington, D.C.

BYF runs wanted ad

The Baptist Youth Fellowship at Faith Baptist Church is fuzzing with activity and just to be sure they can keep it that way, the group is advertising for more.

In the Aug. issue of their paper, BYF News, is a "wanted" poster stating:

"Reward—for average looking youth around 13-14 years of age. Both male and female. . . Any information leading to persons fitting this description should be reported to the bearest B.Y.F. immediately."

FOR THE happiness and welfare of their 'prisoners,' BYF at Faith Baptist offers a full program of activity which includes job opportunities, Bible study, recreation and fellowship plus journalistic experiences in the publication of their monthly journal.

In addition to these activities, Faith's BYF program offers scholarship aid. Similar programs in other churches also make the same aid available.

In a letter published in their monthly issue, the BYF says:

"We have a well planned program aimed at channeling your energies and activities of young people to the end of making them effective Christians and successful livers."

Faith's BYF selects a "Youth of the Month" to exemplify their ideas of "effective Christians and successful livers."

This month's youth was Alicia Johnson whom members describe as "petite" with "limitless energy."

Endowed with "a charming personality," they say Miss Johnson is also an "indispensible instrument" of their church organization.

July's youth was Curley Graves.

Curley was described as "a regular guy" who is not only a very sincere person but a friendly, well-rounded, gentle-manly person" with "a sort of moral and spiritual values . . . unmoved by the unwholesome activities which often lure Christian youths."

Meetings are held at 7 to 8 p.m. Thursday night at the church, 833 N. Bond St.

Words To Live By

By Rev. Robert T. Newbold Jr.

The time is right for a spiritual revival in our nation. Reports from all parts of the United States reveal this.

Since this is true one cannot help but wonder: What are some of the reasons for its delay?

From conversations with many church people, as well as observation of conditions in a number of religious institutions, I conclude:

We are not experiencing a much-needed widespread religious revival because the church in America — frequently without realizing it — shows more concern about its physical condition than its spiritual well being.

THERE IS a church building spree in progress now. The regret, however, in many cases is that these buildings have become ends rather than means to an end.

The buildings have become the object of worship rather than a contributing medium to the Lord through worship of God.

Of course we need new plants for our churches, but when we become building conscious, instead of God conscious, we push the brakes on the impending revival.

ANOTHER reason why a widespread revival in America has been delayed is because many Christians (?) have not learned how to disagree without becoming disagreeable.

They have not obtained the ability to differentiate between a stand for principle and a personal attack.

Thus many churches have become impotent because of internal bickering and dissension.

This points up to the need for big Christians who will not be sidetracked by little people and small talk.

STILL ANOTHER reason for the delayed experience of a revival is the fact that the person who has always sparked revivals is almost completely forgotten.

Who is he? The Holy Spirit.

The New Testament record makes it clear that one cannot appreciate the Pentecostal Revival without also appreciating the ministry of the Holy Spirit. It is from Him that the power for a revival comes.

Despite this fact one hears little or nothing about the Holy Spirit today. He is left out of sermons, ignored in hymnals and barely given a passing nod in our prayers.

INDEED THESE are a few suggestive reasons why we are not experiencing a revival in America.

But, all is not lost! It is not too late. The revival can come. It still come if enough of us will seek to be baptized and subsequently led by the Holy Spirit.
