Lawyers blame hotel for convention loss

The Monumental City Bar Association has written to Robert L. Moore, chairman of the board of the Sheraton Hotels in connection with what the group calls a lack of cooperation by the local hotel in efforts to arrange for a convention.

Linwood G. Koger Jr., president of the association, said in the letter that Milwaukee, rather than Baltimore, will play host to 300 to 400 members of the National Bar Association in 1959 because of the local hotel's failure to cooperate with it.

CHARLES P. HOWARD JR., publicity chairman for the Monumental Bar Association, who was charged with completing arrangements for the convention meeting at the hotel here, told the AFRO:

"I called the hotel on four different occasions and was informed that someone from the hotel would come out to confer with me on arrangements. No one ever came.

"The first time I called in March I talked with the manager. I informed him that it was a predominantly colored group.

"He talked nice but when it came to performance, we couldn't get anything out of him."

Mr. Howard said the Sheraton Belvedere was selected here because of its announced policy of accepting colored groups. Some of the other larger hotels were accepting only colored persons who were part of groups which were predominantly white.

The association said it decided to contact this hotel because many of the members had attended other functions at chain hotels in other cities and understood a similar policy existed in Baltimore.

"IT SEEMS that clarification of consideration of such enterprises is in order, from your office, as it is a very simple matter to issue ayes or no answer to a simple business request," Mr. Koger said in his letter.

He said the local association was "embarrassed" at the Chicago convention this summer when it could not request the convention be brought to Baltimore although most of the delegates had been given to understand that his group would request it.

1st Mrs. Gilkes asks court not to reduce support

Mrs. Emma Gilkes, 3613 Ellamont Rd., ex-wife of local physician Dr. Evan A. Gilkes, stated in Circuit Court last week that she has no knowledge that her former husband's income is "very small" for reasons of the heart condition he alleges he suffers.

Mrs. Gilkes asked the court to throw out his request to reduce monthly payments for the support of the three Gilkes children.

In addition, Mrs. Gilkes requested in the petition that she continue to receive the monthly sum of 236 set by the court forthe support ofthe children.

IN A PETITION filed on Sept. 5, Mrs. Gilkes said: "I am in great need of the current monthly payments for the support and maintenance of the children and I am not able to support the children on a figure lower than $236 by the court.

"My former husband did not live up to the agreement filed between us at which time he agreed to take the children for the month of August and two Sundays each month," the petition stated.

Mrs. Gilkes adds: "All of this has placed heavier burdens on me as to the support of the children."

In concluding her request to the court, Mrs. Gilkes asks that Dr. Gilkes be required to pay the monthly sum of $236 set by the court as well as her attorney's fees and other relief.

MRS. GILKES most recent petition came as an answer to the August 20 request by Dr. Gilkes which asked that he be allowed to pay less money for the support of the children.

He stated: "I am unable to continue payments at the current rate because I am suffering from a heart condition and I am unable to maintain normal practice as a physician.

"My income has been reduced and is very small. My wife has substantial income from her employment as well as outside investments."

THE GILKESES were divorced in May, 1956. The decree was awarded Mrs. Gilkes along with the custody of the children and the physician was ordered to pay $300 a month for their support.

In the spring of this year, Dr. Gilkes was married to the former Dr. Thelma Winder, a Morgan State College professor.

On July 30, Mrs. Gilkes told the court that her ex - husband was $1,248 in arrears on the support money for the children and that she had received no payment for the month of June.

On the same day Judge Edwin Harlan signed an order for Dr. Gilkes to appear in court on Aug. 7 to show why he should not be cited for contempt of court since he had failed to comply with the order to pay for the support of his children.

Subsequent payment of the $1,248 was acknowledged by Mrs. Gilkes in court papers filed on September 5.

dren there should be some give and take, some willingness to cast aside collateral desires and work together for the children who are certainly children to be proud of.

"Both have been brought up with care and one performed on a TV national network and won with a substantial sum.

"I am sorry there has been this destruction of the union. But there's nothing the court can do."

ON MR. Prestwidge's contention that he and his wife had not lived together since September 1956, Judge Warnken commented:

"I find there is no corroboration whatsoever.

"His statement is denied by his wife.

"Testimony of two of his friends simply says they found him in sleeping attire and saw a rumpled bed.

"The testimony is not the quality that should be required.

"I am not satisfied from what I have heard that there has been any refusal of relations. I do believe the wife on that point."

THE COURTROOM identification of "the other woman" came when Mrs. Prestwidge was asked by Judge Warnken: "Is she here? Where is she?"

Mrs. Prestwidge, who was seated in the witness chair, turned toward the spectators, pointed to Mrs. La Rue and said: "There she is, sitting back there."

Mrs. La Rue showed no obvious emotion.

However, as the wife testified as to the times and places she had seen the blonde woman and her husband together, Mrs. La Rue was seen obviously nodding her head and frowning as if in disagreement.

FIRST MENTION of Mrs. LaRue came when Mrs. Prestwidge testified that her husband told her sometime in May that he had found happiness with someone else.

The wife stated: "I just about floored me.

"I asked him what he meant. He said, 'I am going to marry another woman.'

"He openly told me her name was Terry LaRue."

Mrs. Prestwidge also called the court's attention to a note she said she found in her husband wallet.

She said: "I was going through his pockets to get some money for the children.

"I found this suicide note.

"It was signed by Terry LaRue and said, 'Dearest Press: I can't live with you. I can't live without you. Do all you can for Terry and Bunky.'"

MRS. PRESTWIDGE identified "Terry and Bunky" as Mrs. LaRue's two children.

Mrs. Prestwidge added: "The two pictures of her children also were in his pocket. They fell out on the floor and my daughter Barbara said: 'Who are they, mamma?'

Mrs. LaRue's name also came up later in Mrs. Prestwidge's testimony when she stated that she observed her husband and Mrs. LaRue and her two children at Mrs. LaRue's residence, 2208 Massachusetts Ave.

On this point, the wife said: "I observed them in June and July.

"I was parked in an alley in the rear of 2208 Massachusetts Ave. where Mrs. LaRue lives.

ASKED BY Judge Warnken what she saw, Mrs. Prestwidge continued:

"I saw him and I saw her and the two children in the kitchen. They were looking at television.

"They were looking at my television that was taken from my home.

"The children went upstairs. "I watched as he placed his arms around her in an affectionate embrace.

"I watched again on June 19 and I saw him and I saw her drinking beer in the kitchen.

"I saw them when they got in the car. They had a thermos jug. She had on shorts.

"I followed them, but lost them.

"I SAW them on another occasion on June 30.

"They were in the kitchen exchanging embraces.

"I watched about two hours.

"I saw them again on July 2. It was raining hard.

"They were in the kitchen. I could see my television set in her kitchen.

"On July 28, a hot evening, I drove by again. He was sitting on the front steps with her children. She was on the porch.

"I often drove by and saw his car parked there."

Mrs. Prestwidge also stated that she was driving her 1953 Chevrolet while Mr. Prestwidge has a Cadillac.

MRS. PRESTWIDGE also testified about a telephone conversation between her husband and a "feminine voice."

She explained the operator cut her in on her home phone and "they were laughing about the furnishings he had taken from our home.

"I heard him say 'When I get through with her, she'll sign the note.'

"He also asked her did she want one of the air conditioners."

Mrs. Prestwidge also stated that this telephone conversation precipitated the moving of furniture from their home.

She said: "I had to protect some of my things. I was distraught and upset.

"The reason I took my things out of the house was to keep him from giving them to this white woman."

PRIOR TO the May separation, Mrs. Prestwidge stated that she and Mr. Prestwidge enjoyed a wholesome family relationship and lived together as man and wife from February through April of this year.

She added: "My home meant more to me then anything in the world."

Asked if Mr. Prestwidge slept in the back room, Mrs. Prestwidge replied: "Yes. Because of the late hours when he arrived home. He slept there not to be disturbed.

"He would lift Billy bodily from his bed in Billy's room and place the child in the bed in our room.

"He often asked me back in the rear room. That went on ever since we've been married."

THERE WAS also reference to a bank note Mrs. Prestwidge alleged her husband asked her to sign.

She stated: "I did refuse to sign the note. It was a blank note with no amount on it. He said he wanted it to go into contracting business.

"He had changed jobs eight times since we were married.

"I was happy to see him go into business if that was what he wanted to do but I did not think he should go a note on the house since it was so near paid for.

"I suggested that we sell one or both of the cars."

ASKED BY his attorney if she told her husband she would sign the note if he turned the house deed over to her, Mrs. Prestwidge denied the statement, adding:

"I told him that we should protect the house by putting it in my name if he was going to get another note.

"I said in case it should happen as it did in the past when he went into the contracting business four years before, we would not have the house in danger.

"...the Equitable Trust bank was going to foreclose on the house on a note he refused to pay.

"Just recently I had to save the house by borrowing $700. I pay $50 to my bank on that loan. I am paying on all the other bills he left on me."

JUDGE WARNKEN asked the wife if she had received any money from Mr. Prestwidge since their separation in May.

The replied: "Yes, $30 a week. And then recently when the court set the amount at $25 a week, he has sent $25 a week."

She added: "At no time before we were separated did I lock the room or refuse marital relations with him.

"Our relationship was so close-knit. I was shocked.

"I couldn't conceive that he would desert us for a white woman. He was so devoted to us."

Mrs. Prestwidge added: "I was so horrified to know that, my prime ambition was to satisfy him as a wife. He was the father of my children."

MR. PRESTWIDGE took the witness stand before the midday recess to give his side of their life together.

In his original petition for the divorce Mr. Prestwidge alleged his wife deserted him by removing herself from his bedroom and locking the door of her new sleeping quarters.

At the hearing on Wednesday, he testified:

"My children had the habit of coming in our bedroom where we had twin beds pushed together.

"I asked my wife to make them sleep in their own rooms. I couldn't rest with four people in two beds.

"I asked them to leave the room. She counteracted anything I said.

"I said, 'get those kids out of here.'

"She said, 'if anyone does out, it's you.'

I said, 'all right, I'll go.'

"I moved out into the back bedroom to call her bluff.

"She then locked the bedroom door.

"I TRIED several times to get her to let me come back. I invited her back to the bedroom in the back, but she refused.

"That was in September, 1956, and that was continued until now.

"I kept asking her, she refused.

"I left in May, 1958."

Mr. Prestwidge also told the court that on the night of May 13 furnishings were gone from their home.

He said: "I came home shortly after midnight. I noticed the air conditioner was gone.

"I saw the hi-fi set was gone, the silverware, the good china and the radios and pictures of the children were gone.

"I SAW her the following morning and she said they were out to be repaired.

"I asked her how was it that silverware and china and pictures were being repaired.

"On May 14, the following day I came home and opened the door and I was shocked beyond belief.

"Everything on the first floor was gone. The dining room, kitchen, everything except the refrigerator was gone.

"The new furniture, a bedroom set, was gone.

"She was not there. The children were not there.

"I called a friend of mine, Carlos Hutchins. I called my brother Herbert Prestwidge to see what was left.

"A washer, refrigerator and two beds in the master bedroom.

"I put them on a truck. I took everything except what belonged to my children.

"I didn't want to touch them.

"I put everything in a garage in storage."

MR. PRESTWIDGE also stated that he sent the TV set to be repaired and let it stay at the repair shop after his wife removed furniture from the house.

Mr. Washington, the repairman, testified that Mr. Prestwidge called for the set at a later date and took it away from the shop, however.

In cross examination, Lena K. Lee, who represented Mrs. Prestwidge, asked Mr. Prestwidge about the occasions in December 1956 when the Prestwidge family went to New York to witness the TV appearance of the daughter, Barbara.

Attorney Lee said: "Didn't you stay at the Taft Hotel and occupy rooms 15-16 on Dec. 25, 1956?"

Mr. Prestwidge admitted that he signed the hotel register and stayed in the room with his wife and children.

As he was shown copies of the hotel bills, Mr. Prestwidge stated:

"I see them, all right, but I fail to see where they say that we stayed there as man and wife."

LATER IN his testimony which took two hours, he said his wife left him a "rickety" card table in the kitchen on which there was a paper napkin and an artificial flower.

He said: "It was contempt that prompted this.

"I had been living like this for seven years. When I came in, there was never any meals. I never had a clean shirt.

"Circumstances were intolerable. I asked for a divorce many times.

"We were living a farce and a sham. We were not living a married life. I didn't want to go but I was never a part of the family.

"When we had the kids, I thought I would have someone to hold on to, someone to love, and I would have something no matter how she treated me.

"But, I was forgotten about. "Our marriage went on the rocks years ago."

THE HUSBAND revealed that he was manager of the Sphinx Club, an Avenue night club at $150 per week salary in 1956.

He stated that he left the club to do contracting business and that his income is now about $75 a week.

However, Mr. Prestwidge denied that he has a contract with owner to share in the profits of the club.

He said; "We worked out a verbal agreement but I just got $150 a week. That's all."

Mr. Prestwidge reported that he now is working for Mr. Tilghman at 2105 Pennsylvania Ave. as a carpenter.

TESTIFYING FOR Mr. Prestwidge was Carlos Hutchins who gave his address as 1406 Madison Ave., and stated that he has been in contracting business since 1940.

The following questions and answers comprise Mr. Hutchins' testimony:

Mrs. Lee: Were you a frequent visitor in the Prestwidge home?

A—No.

Q—Were you associated in business with Mr. Prestwidge?

A—No. We have been friends for 20 years.

Q—What is your occupation? Isn't it true that you have no visible means of support?

Judge Warnken: You're just a carpenter and you pick up odd jobs, is that it?

A—Yes.

Mrs. Lee: Have you ever been convicted of a crime?

A—Yes. I was convicted of numbers in 1949.

Q—Any other times?

A—Maybe five or six times. I don't remember.

ALSO TESTIFYING for Mr. Prestwidge was a close friend Charles Blue Dotson, who stated that he observed Mr. Prestwidge in his night clothes in a back bedroom when he went to the Prestwidge home to "chew the rag" with him.

Under cross-examination by Mrs. Lee, Mr. Dotson, who stated that he resides at 2520 Madison Ave., also admitted conviction of numbers violation in January, 1950.

Mrs. Prestwidge later testified that she did not allow Mr. Hutchins in her home because "his reputation at gambling was not good influence for the children."

TWENTY - ONE persons, including the principals, their children and lawyers, were present for the hearing held in Room 451 Courthouse.

Mr. Prestwidge sat on a front bench to the right.

He wore a light brown summer suit, white shirt, dark brown shoes.

Mrs. Prestwidge sat on the front bench on the opposite side of the courtroom.

She is a Carver High School graduate. She wore a black lace summer frock cut in a V at the back, white gloves and a blue sequin-decorated hat.

Mrs. LaRue was seated on a rear bench in the courtroom with a blond man. She wore a black dress with short cape set off by a black and white polka dot bow. Her blonde hair was cut in a short bob.

ALSO PRESENT at the hearing were Mrs. Prestwidge's sisters, Mrs. Hazel Barrett who testified in her behalf; Myrtle Koger and Mrs. Maryo Oliver.

Others present included Charles Tilghman, night club owners and private detectives who were not called on to testify.

At the conclusion of the hearing Mrs. LaRue left the courtroom but returned and asked to speak to Mr. Prestwidge's attorney, Mr. Rombro. He had left the courtroom however.

Mrs. Prestwidge was represented by Mrs. Lena K. Lee, and Milton Allen, attorneys.

Mr. Prestwidge was represented by Richrd T. Rombro and Joseph H. Omansky.

Wounded officer recovers at hospital

WASHINGTON

Police Pvt. Walter L. Young, 32, who was shot Monday morning while arresting a suspect, is "pulling through progressively" at the Washington Hospital Center.

Widower and father of four small children, Private Young was operated on Monday afternoon for bullet punctures in the stomach and kidney. He was transferred from the emergency ward to a private room under the personal care of his sister, Mrs. Ruth Y. Goodwin, a registered nurse, a hospital spokesman said.

The hospital asked for approval of the Fire-Rescue Department for Mrs. Goodwin to care for her brother until he is fully recovered. Mrs. Goodwin is a Cardozo High School nurse.

APPOINTED TO the police force in Feb. 1957 and rated a "very good officer," Private Young was critically wounded with his own .38 caliber revolver about 7 a.m. Monday when he investigated a vagrancy in the rear of the Embassy Dairy, 1820 First St., N.W.

The Precinct No. 2 officer attempted to arrest Samuel (Sammy) Taylor, 34, of the unit block S St., NW, and the two men struggled, police said. Taylor wrested away Private Young's weapon, fired in the air once and the second shot went into the officer's abdomen and came out of his back, according to inspector Richard A. Felber.

Taylor dropped the weapon and fled the scene. A dairy employee summoned cruiser officers David B. McQueen and Charles Gilmartin of No. 2 Precinct. Also on the scene were Inspector John E. Winters, Capt. Alexander S. Douglass (Young's commander), Capt. George H. Robinson, acting captain Thomas L. Souder of No. 2, Lt. Norman L. Richardson of No. 2, acting Cpl. Thomas A. Bowles and Det. Sgt. John C. Wilson of Homicide Squad.

PRIVATE YOUNG who recently lost his wife, Thelma, in a Baltimore auto accident, was sped to the Washington Hospital Center in critical condition.

Six minutes later Taylor, described as a known vagrant in the area, was picked up a few blocks away on North Capital St., police said.

He was charged with "assault with a dangerous weapon on a police officer with intent to kill." But during arraignment in Municipal Court four hours later, Taylor was charged with assault on a police officer, according to Asst. U.S. Attorney Frank J. Wilson.

Taylor was held for grand jury action and bond was set at $75,000. His court-appointed attorney is Francis S. Walsh.

Labor puts its OK on Harry Cole

Organized labor has put its okay on Harry Cole, state senator, R., 4th District; Emory Cole, R., 4th District, legislator, for re-election in November, and Mrs. Irma Dixon, Dem., for election to the state legislature from the 4th District.

The action was taken by the 62-member AFL - CIO Labor Council in session Sept. 11 at Seafarers Hall.

The Council endorsed Harry Cole over his Democratic opponent Alvin Jones, a member of the Pollack group making his freshman bid for office.

Mr. Jones was questioned by an examining committee on his knowledge of legislation affecting schools, fair employment and old age pensions and was not recommended for endorsement by the committee.

LABOR DELEGATES made it plain that a candidate's record on all the matters in which labor is interested must be sound to get its approval.

State Senator George Della, Democrat, 6th Baltimore District, was recommended by the survey committee, but the Council turned Mr. Della down. No state senate candidate from this district was endorseu.

Delegates recalled a statement on white supremacy alleged to have come from the Della headquarters in the 1954 campaign.

IN ANNE Arundel County, the Council overruled its committee and endorsed for state senate, William P. Prendergast, R.

Delegates turned down a motion to endorse incumbent State Senator Louis N. Phipps, D., because of his record on Civil Rights.

Mr. Phipps was said to have voted against one Cole bill to end segregation and another to approve the 14th Amendment.

In Baltimore's 3rd Legislative District, Labor turned thumbs down on Samuel A. Colotta for state senator and endorsed J. Raymond Sullivan, D.

Again it was a question of Mr. Colotta's record on labor and civil rights measures.

United Appeal Drive to seek $4,602,000

Twenty-five thousand men and women will participate in Maryland's largest annual fund-raising campaign when the Community Chest-Red Cross United Appeal kicks off next Monday in an effort to raise $4,602,000.

Money collected in the six-and-one-half-week drive will go to support the 41 Community Chest agencies and three Red Cross chapters serving Baltimore city and Baltimore, Anne Arundel, Howard and Harford counties in 1959.

Funds will be sought in three major areas of solicitation: (1) corporations and industrial firms, (2) executives, and (3) employees and families living in the Appeal area.

The Appeal will cover a 1900 square mile area housing a population of 1,600,000.

Volunteers and local professional campaign workers will seek $3,647,000 in Divisions A, B and C, the three industrial and business divisions of the campaign; $447,000 among government, professional and military workers, in Division D, and $450,000 in Division E, the neighborhood house-to-house and business solicitation.

In addition, $58,000 will be sought in the geographical area of Harford county.

THE 1958 United Appeal goal is the same as last year's goal of $4,572,000, except for an additional $30,000 to provide for institution of a Red Cross Blood Bank Program.

The campaign, which will provide health, welfare and recreation services for over 500,000 people in the metropolitan Baltimore area in the coming year, will close on November 5.

Regional meetings

The Governor's Committee to Promote Employment of the Physically Handicapped will sponsor regional meetings in Hagerstown, Baltimore City and Easton, Md., this month so that county chairmen and members of their committees may be helped to understand and carry out local programs which stimulate employment of physically handicapped Marylanders.

The format of each meeting will be similar, beginning with a morning session at 10 a.m. and continuing through a luncheon-meeting.

Brief afternoon workshop sessions may also be included, according to R. C. Thompson and D. L. B. Fringer, co-chairmen of the Committee in Maryland.

Theft confession fails to halt dope conviction

"I went out to Cold Spring La. and Park Heights Ave. and stole seven boxes of stockings, and brought them back to Lafayette Ave. to sell them. I am not the man they are talking about."

This confession of a theft failed to save Calvin Johnson, 25, 1100 block Etting St., from a narcotics law violation conviction in Criminal Court Wednesday.

Judge Anselm Sodaro withheld sentence, however, pending a possible motion for a new trial.

According to Capt. Joseph Carroll, head of the Police Department's narcotics squad, Mr. Johnson was arrested on June 6 at Lafayette Ave. and Stricker Sts., after he had previously been seen selling a quantity of heroin to an undercover agent.

William R. Jackson, FBI narcotics division agent, called to the witness stand by James W. Murphy, assistant State's attorney, testified that he had observed the prearranged purchase by a "special employee" working with him on May 9 near a tavern in that section.

Mrs. Johnson contended that a two - year sentence in 1954 for this conviction and a two - year sentence in 1954 for his arrest was a case of mistaken identity.

Mr. Murphy revealed that the accused man had a predope addict until 1954.

My beautiful home on corner terraced lot in nicest section of Ashburton. Custom built by my late husband, a well known builder. It has many lovely appointments and extras, aside from the finest in construction and low cost maintenance.

Our home is presently occupied as a one family residence, but is already arranged for 2 gracious apartments either private or communicating. Has 5 large rooms and two tile baths on each floor — 2 natural fireplaces, walk-in cedar closets, panelled walls with built-in-bookcases, large clubroom, double garage, porch, etc.

Price Reduced. Inspection by appointment. Please call my son...

VITAMIN ENRICHED SCHMIDT'S BLUE RIBBON BREAD Makes Smarter Children at School

BUY THIS ONE...

● Medical Science and dietary scientists have proved that children with a sufficient amount of Vitamins, Minerals, Calcium and Proteins are smarter students than those children who are not given proper diets.

How fortunate that Schmidt's Vitamin-Enriched Blue Ribbon Bread is an excellent source of all of these.

THIS MEANS VITAMINS AND MINERALS HAVE BEEN ADDED TO MEET U. S. GOVERNMENT STANDARDS
