THE MORGAN COLLEGE Faculty Wives gave a tea, an annual affair which is given to welcome the new faculty wives, Sunday.

It was held in the beautiful lounge of Truth Hall House. All eyes were on the glamorous bride of Dr. Virgil Clift. Dr. Clift has just returned from Baghdad, Iraq, where the new Mrs. Clift is a native of that country.

Petite Mrs. Joseph Padgett won every ones hearts. She is also a talented singer. Mrs. Lillie Mae Jones, another newly wife and one who posses great warmth and friendliness. Mrs. Robert Newbold impressed all present by her dignity and graciousness.

The program consisted of four, beautifully rendered solos by Leonard Ford, son of the president, Mrs. Alice Ford.

Mrs. Flossie Dedmond gave a brief talk which might have been titled "Never Underestimate the power of a Woman." Incidentally Mrs. Dedmond was one of the most chic among those present.

The highlight of the entertainment was a pseudo radio gossip program, delightfully executed by Mrs. Bernice Munroe. She gave a witty account of the latest news among faculty wives.

The following wives were welcomed by Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Martin Jenkins, honorary president:

Mesdames Marcus Allen, James Fleming, Maurice Lee, Virgil Clift, White, Peters, Waters Turpin, Frederick Dedmond, Arthur Lamb, Daniel Skinner, Roger Lee Ford.

Mesdames Saul Lillienstein, Therman O'Daniel, Charles Sykes, Robert Newbold, Benjamin Quarles, Clarence Monroe, Howard Cornish, Edward Hurt, Cyril Atkins.

The newlywed Herbert Nutters (Vivian Terry) are in their new domicile at 3810 Bonner Road . . . and the bride, who became ill at her wedding, is feeling much better.

Blamed for her blackout was the fact that prior to the wedding a falling mirror had struck her on the head, plus the heat and the excitement.

She was one of the prettiest brides of the season . . . and no less chic was her aunt and only town relative, who wore an ice blue frock with matching accessories. Mrs. Walter Beckett, Mrs. Handy Beckett and Mrs. Anna Bond were here

Dolores Holt was recently married to Bernard Stewart, both of Baltimore, at the St. Gregory's Chapel on Lafayette Avenue and Poplar Grove Street.

Mrs. Stewart was married in a stunning creation in starmist white. After the wedding, a reception was held in the 900 block of Franklintown Road. The Stewarts are now residing in the 4000 block of Duvall Avenue.

Along with maintaining good grades, Dave finds time to be active in a Methodist Youth group, holds the office of president in a local jazz society, and to study the tenor sax, baritone sax, and clarinet.

He is also excellent in art as evidenced by creative work on the garage door of the Hubbard home done in Persian turquoise and oyster white.

David's fine work in landscaping the grounds are so natural a setting for the Old Virginia-brick home. Dave has also exemplified his remarkable artistic talents in the kitchen of the Normount Avenue house, done in birch cabinets, copper-toned appliances, and island coral marble counter tops. He really had a chance to display his fine work in his home when he held an informal get-together for a few friends recently.

Public education in Anne Arundel County is progressing among its pupils, students and teachers, more and more each year.

Instead of 42 small elementary schools in the county now, there are 13 large, modern consolidated schools with a population of 3,604 pupils. There are 129 elementary teachers.

A feature of the beginning of the school year is a workshop held specifically for newly-trained teachers. This year's program was conducted at the Jones Elementary School with special attention focussed on the responsibilities of a teacher.

Topics and those in the discussion group were as follows:

"The Role of the Teacher in the Organizing of the School Day for Effective Instruction;" Everett Hettigrew, principal, Lothian School; "The Teachers' Responsibility for Records and Record Keeping," Mrs. Mary C. Brown, visiting teacher of the county and Frank Hebron, principal, Harman School;

"The Teachers' Responsibility for Utilizing Available Opportunities for Self Improvement," Walter Mills, principal, for Observing Professional Parole Elementary School; "The Teachers' Responsibility Ethics," Henry Holland, principal, Carver School and Mrs. Arletta Walker, vice-principal, Harman School;

"The Responsibility of Teachers for Practices That Are Basic to Good Instruction," George Carey, state supervisor of the elementary schools and Miss Sarah V. Jones, supervisor of Anne Arundel County.

EACH YEAR also brings into the county new teachers, some of whom are natives, and others from other parts of the state and out of the state.

New elementary teachers, their home towns and the schools where they are working, are listed here:

Miss Rose Ellen Murden, Annapolis, Lothian School; Miss Marguerite Johnson, Eastport, Parole School; Mrs. Mae Murden Fowler, Parole School; Miss Adams Park School; Miss Wilamae Pergerson, Annapolis, Lothian School;

Mrs. Ellen Parker Brooks, Annapolis, Lothian School; Miss Mary Chase, Westminster, Adams Park School; Mrs. Margaret Wallace Holland, Lothian, Bristol School; Mrs. Mary Falls, Fort Meade, Adams Park School;

Mrs. Nina P. Johnson, Fort Meade, Parole School; Mrs. Bettie Makell Coleman, Parole, Adams Park School; Miss Angela Baden, Annapolis, Jones School; John Fountain, Shady Side, Friendship School;

Julius Little, Pumphrey, Pumphrey School; Mrs. Wanda Lee Hampton, Annapolis, Adams Park School; Miss Doris Oswald, Baltimore (music) Pumphrey and New Freetown Schools;

Eastport area.

Mrs. Jackson is a member of the staff of the Anne Arundel General Hospital as a "nurse-in-charge" from 3 p.m. — 11 p.m., where she has served for three years.

Having lived in Annapolis for about 25 years, Mrs. Jackson has done private duty in Annapolis and Washington for a number of years.

For one year she was a staff nurse at Burwell's Private Hospital in the Nation's Capitol.

Before she became connected with the general hospital she served here in the community as a public health nurse for three years and eight months. Perhaps she may have remained in this position had it not been for illness. She was the first person to work in such a capacity in this area.

In this phase of her work she served the public schools and Parole Health Center. In talking to Mrs. Jackson, we found that she is interested in nursing since childhood.

"When a little girl about six years old, often wished that I could made people sick," said Mrs. Jackson.

"I really wanted to know and wanted to know how I could help those sick people. This desire to be a help to suffering humanity led me to study nursing, and it has been fulfilled with a great satisfaction in my life, helping the sick," she further stated.

Surely Mrs. Jackson is dedicated to her work with such an attitude. It is very inspiring to note her professionalism in her attitude. It is easy to see that she is efficient as she goes about it.

• • •

BORN IN Doylestown, Pa., Mrs. Jackson attended the public schools there and received her training at "Freedmen's Hospital School of Nursing."

She has had additional training as an instructive visiting nurse and in physiotherapy.

During her high school days, Mrs. Jackson was the fifth colored girl to graduate in her class from Doylestown High School.

When an older sister, the late Mrs. Inez Stratton, was the 3rd Negro graduated from the same school, she was valedictorian of her class and received a gold medal for presentation, the bringing of the domestic science course into the school.

At the time Mrs. Jackson graduated she received the first prize for outstanding work in domestic science, the course which had been initiated.

Her parents were the Joseph Strattons of Doylestown—she a schoolteacher and he a musician.

Her mother, also during her time, was a midwife, and was considered one of the best by the physicians of the community. No doubt Mrs. Jackson's urge to become a nurse stemmed from the work of her mother.

Her brother, Dr. Howard Stratton is a leading physician in Philadelphia.

A wife and mother, she is married to James Jackson, [illegible]

She is also a member of the Peerless Rebekahs and served as president for four years.

Her church affiliation remains with the family church in her home town, the Doylestown Presbyterian Church.

ON WEDNESDAY, Sept. 24, at 2 p.m., graduating exercises of the School of Practical Nursing of the Anne Arundel General Hospital will be held at the Nurses' Home, 38 Franklin St.

In the class of 11 will be Mrs. Beatrice Brown Clark, 1803 Robert Small Rd., Mrs. Helen Queen Gilmer, 2046 Forest Dr., and Mrs. Ollie Singleton Thornton, 85 Charles St.

Mrs. Charlotte Rawlings, director of nursing, will preside. The address will be delivered by William J. McWilliams, president of the board of managers.

Presentation of diplomas will be made by Dr. Jesse D. Wilkins, assistant chief of staff and chief of surgery, and presentation of pins will be made by Mrs. Edna Doyle, director of practical nurse education.

Lyman C. Whittaker is administrator of the hospital. . .

THE COMMITTEE for Good Citizenship, headed up by the Rev. Leroy Bowman, is diligently working to bring about full coverage of our very large Anne Arundel County in the registration of citizens.

How can people of this county expect to be considered for first-class citizenship when they do not project themselves into the community as first-class citizens?

No person is a first-class citizen who refuses to register and vote or take an interest in the welfare of their community, state and country. Even as late as it is there are hundreds in this county who have not registered.

Our vote is our one effective power weapon to help us to shoulder our responsibility in seeing to it that the best qualified office seekers become elected and that the best candidates for office are elected.

Taking an interest in our local government in this way gives us protection and we will also gain more respect from the majority group, and not only gain more respect, but demand more in the interest of our group.

We hope those persons who are not registered will heed such information and do their duty by Sept. 22, the deadline date for registration of voters to participate in the coming election.

This year is one of our most crucial years in shouldering the great responsibility we are faced with in our efforts in civic rights.

For further information, persons interested may contact Milton Haskins at 47 Calvert St., or call him by phone at Colonial 3-9760. Arrangements can be made for free transportation for those who do not have it.
