CLEANING UP OPERATION — Demolition work is almost complete in the site bounded by Bateman, Carlisle, Hilton and Denison Sts., which will house a new elementary school. The site was the subject of controversy several months ago when the Board of Education announced that it wanted to build a school and hence the well-kept homes would have to come down. No date has been set for the start of work on the new school but officials explained they wanted to have the ground cleared as swiftly as possible. A final decision has not been reached on the school. The scene shown here is looking from Denison St. toward Hilton along Bateman.

School named after wife of local man

CAMDEN, Miss.—Camden's new junior and senior high school, a functional concrete block, brick steel and glass structure which opened on Sept. 8, bears the name of the wife of a former Baltimorean.

The school, located near Camden, is named after Mrs. Velma Jackson, a long-time Jeanes teacher in the Mississippi schools, who died in 1955.

Mrs. Jackson was the wife of Edward Jackson, a former resident of Baltimore, whom she met in Jacksonville, Fla., in 1940 the year before entry of the United States in World War II.

• • •

MR. JACKSON'S mother, Mrs. Viola Jackson, who lives at 426 W. Biddle St., said:

"Edward and Velma met in Jacksonville while he was a shore patrolman with the Navy.

"Afterward he tried to get her to to come back up to Baltimore, but she was devoted to her teaching, so they both lived there until her death three years ago."

The school which bears Mrs. Jackson's name will accommodate 500 pupils this year and has 11 classrooms, a science lab, home economics rooms, teachers lounge and offices. Its combination cafeteria and autorium will seat more than 500 persons.

It is a one-story building with its classrooms opening onto a 400 foot corridor and was built at a cost of over $200,000.

Words To Live By

By ROBERT T. NEWBOLD

The endless struggle of life is, in part, occasioned by a search for answers to some basic questions. Three of these are: Who am I? Why am I here? Where am I going?

Some would have us believe that we are mere parts of the orbit of things upon the earth. Obviously such a view deprives us of our sacredness and robs us of our dignity.

At the other extreme are those who would suggest that we are the sovereigns of the earth, being, therefore, self-sufficient. This thesis substitutes the sovereignity of man for that of God and makes the former his own saviour.

• • •

THE FALLACIES of these points of view should prompt adoption of the traditional concept that we are sons and daughters of God, having been created for fellowship with Him.

This is the answer that points up man's sacredness, dignity and true worth.

Moreover, it brings us to the second answer.

Man was created to "glorify God and enjoy him forever." All other plans and purposes should take second place to this. The chief reason we are here, therefore, is not for pleasure —as many of our predecessors and contemporaries suggest.

We are not here to withdraw ffrom the people in, or things of, the world as the ascetics would have us believe. We are here to exalt God in word and deed and experience unending communion with Him.

• • •

THE LATTER suggests the answer to the third question.

We should be striving to go back to the Father to live with Him forever. We shall go as spiritual, not physical, beings. Now we are mortal beings, then we shall be immortal.

What are your answers to these questions? In a real sense they reveal your outlook on life and indicate whether you are adjusted.

NOW, LET'S SEE—It's easy to imagine how such a job as this could be a little tedious for a three-year-old and Vickey Lou Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Jones 4912 Alhambra Ave., has lots of opportunities to see she is no different from most little tots her age. However, at the St. Mark's Institutional Baptist Church where Vickey attends nursery school, she learns to cope with the minor problems of life along with other children. Mrs. Anne Straughn is director of the nursery school.

Genetics course at Morgan

"Elementary Genetics" is one of four new courses that will be offered by Morgan State College in the fall term opening September 29.

Other new courses added to the cirriculum are: "Administration of the American Public School System", "Art in Daily Living," and "Scientific French."

The course in genetics will be taught by Dr. Percy H. Baker, who s joining the faculty as an assistant professor in the department of bology. Dr. Baker specialized in genetics in his sutdy for the doctorate degree at the University of Michigan.

"Administration of the American Public School System" will be offered in the evening, Mondays and Wednesdays, 6-7:30, and will be taught by Dr. Elaine Davis, who received the doctorate degree with Phi Beta Kappa honors at the Johns Hopkins University in June.

The course is designed to be of special value to teachers, but is open to undergraduates as well.

"ART IN Daily Living" will also be offered as an evening course, Tuesdays and Thursdays, 7:30 - 9, and is designed to provide general experiences in art.

The course will be taught by Cornelius Griffin, a practicing artist and teacher at the Dunbar High School

"Scientific French" will be offered in the regular day session and should be helpful to students majoring in science who need a language background.

Mrs. Mary Cater Law, assistant professor in the department of modern languages, will teach the course.

Coppin prexy urges self evaluation

Dr. Parlett L. Moore, president of Coppin College, addressed the students in the first assembly on Sept. 12.

Due to the increased enrollment, assemblies are conducted in two sessions.

Dr. Moore spoke at length to the students about the various improvement programs under way and being initiated.

These include:

1. The eight - year Capital Improvement Program, based upon the program needs of the College, which has been carefully planned and approved by the State Department of Education.

Of this extensive project, Dr. Moore said, "Its implementation will depend as much upon the impression which you (students), your friends, and other friends of Coppin can make upon the Baltimore delegation to the 1958 General Assembly of Maryland as upon any efforts of the College Administration or the State Department of Education.

• • •

2 THE SHIFT in administration and faculty focus from planning for plant expansion to planig for program expasion and improvement. New offering in science, mathematics, and foreign languages are planned, but the addition of these new subjects to the curriculum will not strengthen the program unless students elect these subjects, and pursue them diligently to the point of mastery.

3. Increased use of the college library. With nearly 16,000 volumes in the library this year, and an expected increase to 23,000 next year, the excuse for limited use of the library on the ground that needed materials are not provided will no longer be valid.

4. The present Fifth Year Program will be de-emphasized and eventually eliminated. All energies must be directed toward the development of fully accredited four - year undergraduate elementary and kindergarten - primary courses before any consideration is given to special programs for graduate students.

5. For the next 17 months the attention of the administration and faculty will be directed towards an intensive program of self-evaluation at the college, preparatory to an evaluation by the Middle States Association in February, 1960.

Pratt class will assist adult readers

A free course to increase reading efficiency, designed to help people get more pleasure and profit from their professional and leisure-time reading, is being offered by the Baltimore Department of Education, in cooperation with the Enoch Pratt Free Library.

Starting Sept. 24, and continuing on Wednesdays thereafter from 7 to 9 p.m. through Dec. 10, the weekly sessions will be held in the library's central films department, 400 Cathedral St.

Joseph E. Burke, Baltimore attorney and a teacher in the public schools' adult evening classes, will conduct the course.

According to Mrs. Polly G. Anderson, of the library staff, registration is limited. Anyone desiring to enroll, should telephone the Pratt's office of adult services, MUlberry 5-6700, Ext. 48.

Junior College begins mechanical technology

"Mechanical technology" will be offered as a new curriculum for the first time this fall in the evening division at Baltimore Junior College.

It is designed to prepare men who are interested in positions as skilled technicians in the aircraft and steel industries of this area.

Courses to be offered for the beginning of this curriculum include algebra, technical calculations, engineering drawing and English writing.

A companion curriculum in "Electronics Technology" which prepares men for technician positions in the electronics ndustres wll continue to be available.

Registration will be held at the college, 33rd St. and The Alameda, on Sept. 22, 23 and 24, Monday through Wednesday from 7 to 9 p.m.

Instruction begins on Monday, Sept. 29. Inquiries in person or by telephone may be made during the day at the college.

Pre-school days—'Dear Old Golden Rule Days'

By SHELIA SHIELDS

"Since the public schools discontinued pre-kindergartens, we felt a particular need for something like this in our community," said Mrs. Anne Straughn, director of the nursery school at St. Mark's Institutional Baptist Church.

Since its opening at the beginning of Sept., the school has enrolled approximately 15 pupils.

As she talked, Mrs. Straughn, a former registered nurse for the Baltimore City Health Department was undaunted by the noise of 13 children playing in the large basement room of the Lanvale and Bentalou Sts. church.

"We are in the process of registering children now," she said. We have more on part time."

The part-timers in the nursery school are children who attended half-day sessions in public schools.

"We have a school bus, you know," Mrs. Straughn added. "It picks them up in the morning and picks up the part time children from school at noon."

• • •

THIS SCHOOLMARM'S day begins at 6:30 when the school opens. The first of her charges arrives at 7.

From that time on, she is surrounded (knee-deep) with fluffy-skirted little girls and wide-eyed, pugnacious, but precious little boys.

The youngest of the children is 21-months-old. He was accepted, Mrs. Straughn explained, because he was able to do many things for himself.

The early arrivers are sent back to bed, says Mrs. Straughn. When most of the class has arrived, they have morning devotional services together.

Children of working parents, her charges are kept active and their busy routine does not leave time to miss mom and dad.

After breakfast of cereal, toast, juice and milk, comes recreation time.

For recreation, the children have impromptu play, group games, painting and reading." The play period runs to varying lengths—until the children become restless.

"Most of the time — when the weather permits — we go out," says Mrs. Straughn. We like to visit the market, the fire engine stations and the train station," she added.

After this, the children get a chance to practice the personal habits they are taught, like washing up for lunch.

Lunch is usually served at noon, and afterwards they are sent back to the lavatories.

By this time, a persistant yawn might escape from one of the toddlers after a hard day at play, so this is nap-time.

Sleepy-time finds the tots resting on pretty little aluminum stack-cots. Their linens are supplied by their parents who are also responsible for keeping them clean.

• • •

AFTER NAP-TIME, they are bathed, dressed and will probably play until it is time for their school bus to take them home. School closes at 5 p.m.

The nursery school has pick-up and delivery service to areas as far as East Baltimore and Govans. The bus is driven by Harold L. Dobson.

St. Mark' Institutional Nurery School is a church project and tuition for each child is scaled to how much parents can afford to pay.

The size of the children and their ability to help themselves is also a factor in deciding fees at the school. The larger child who can help himself, and possibly someone else, will cost less.

Mrs. Straughn, the school's director, and Mr. Dobson, the school bus driver, are the daughter and son of the church's pastor, the Rev. Spencer Dobson, Sr.

Children currently enrolled in the nursery school are:

Eric and Venus Davis, Calvin, Booker and Francis Garland, Wendy Nelson, Vicky Lou Jones, Patricia Ann Bush, Joseph Campbell;

Louvenia Ann Gunther, Paul Anderson, Keith and Spencer Dobson 3rd.

Volunteer workers at the school are Mrs. Effie Lyles, Mrs. Ruth Bush and Mrs. Estelle Dobson.

SO MUCH TO LEARN — The first days are always the toughest and after two weeks of attending nursery school class, the toddlers in the picutre are falling into line, ready for action. Seated in front, are Eric Davis, Keith Dobson and Paul Anderson. On the second row are Calvin Garland, Spencer Dobson 3rd, Vickey Lou Jones, Patricia Anne Bush, Louvenia Ann Gunther, Joseph Campbell, Booker Garland, Francis Garland, Wendy Miller and Venus Davis. Mrs. Straughn, the director, is seated at right.

Varied courses at Patterson Park

More than 15 courses on the high school level have been organized at the Patterson Park Evening Center. Both the academic and business education fields are represented.

On Sept. 29, other phases of the Center's program will begin to function.

Those who are interested in the courses offered may register at the school on the night when the courses of their choice are offered. All classes begin at 7:30 and end at 9:30 p.m.

The Patterson Park Evening Center is located at Pratt St. and Ellwood Ave. There is no tuition charge for residents of Baltimore City.

Forest Park classes

The Forest Park Evening Center will offer a course in practical psychology every Wednesday evening from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. beginning Wednesday, October 1.

Registration will be held on Monday, Sept. 29 at the school. This course is free to residents of Baltimore City.

Morgan State sets evening classes

Registration for classes at Morgan Evening College is set for 6 p.m Sept. 24, 25 and 26, in Room 100 of Holmes Hall.

In addition to the usual courses in business administration, economics, English, geography, education, mathematics, health education, philosophy, psychology, history, the humanities, science, political science, several new courses will be added to the catalogue of evening classes.

"Principles of Real Estate" taught by Daniel Spaulding, is geared to the educational needs of real estate office employees, prospective home buyers, home owners, students of housing, real estate brokers and laymen.

This will deal with ownership, real estate practices, types of deeds, leases, restrictions, real estate brokerage, marketing and appraisal and property management.

Dr. Elaine C. Davis is instructor of "Administration of the American Public School System," a course in education.

• • •

"ART IN DAILY LIVING" is instructed by Cornelius Griffin. "Education Measurements," is being instructed by Dr. William T. Smith, Mrs. E. W. Collier will teach a course in reading.

Dr. William Lockwood is director of the evening school.
