In Baltimore Churches

An FEPC would mean employment of white persons by colored firms as well as opening opportunities to minorities, an editorial in Christian Community Church pointed out this week.

The editorial cited the fact that without unity at the ballot box, progress toward true democracy will be extremely slow with or without FEPC.

It poses also the possibility of white workers outnumbering colored persons in colored businesses through strict appliance of FEPC regulations.

For the same reasons that a white insurance company under FEPC would have to employ a colored worker, a colored company would have to employ a white worker, it was pointed out.

Democracy for All

"We believe," the editorial declared, "that this is good legislation because it would mean democracy for all."
