Oxford Tense Over Lincoln Incident, Burgess Charges

Civil Rights Enforcement Drive Unwise, Official Says

Denies Rumor He Plans to Resign From Trustee Board at This Time

By LEON SNEED

PHILADELPHIA

Dr. Guy T. Holcombe, burgess of Oxford, Pa., where Lincoln University students are fighting racial segregation in public places, told the AFRO, this week, that he personally felt colored citizens were entitled to unrestricted accommodations.

But, he added, he disagreed with the methods used by the students in their campaign to enforce the State Civil Rights Law in the borough near the school.

"The situation here now is very bad and tense," declared the physician who is also a trustee of Lincoln, and whose position in the matter has been criticized by persons on both sides of the controversy.

Resents Pressure

He attributed the resentment of white borough residents to the fact that Lincoln students and faculty members tried to "force" the issue to a head by visiting two restaurants and a movie house in large numbers rather than individually.

"I think the mistakes made in the campaign were the results of the exuberance of youth—wanting to do something in a hurry," the borough head said, adding that there were loopholes in the campaign which "instead of helping, aggravated the other side."

Meanwhile, Gov. James H. Duff has remained silent on the request that he appoint a special district attorney to handle the two civil rights cases growing out of the campaign to break jim crow in Oxford.

The request was made by Theodore O. Spaulding, E. Washington Rhodes and James K. Baker, attorneys for the Philadelphia chapter of the NAACP and alumni of the university.

Case to Grand Jury

Defendants in the cases which will be presented to the Chester County grand jury this month are Chris Vergis, owner of the Oxford Hotel and Coffee Shop, and Joseph Crowl, manager of the Oxford Theatre.

Charges against both men were brought by the Lincoln University chapter of the NAACP, which is leading the campaign, aided by the Philadelphia NAACP and supported by alumni of the school.

Mob violence was narrowly averted recently when a group of students and faculty members visited the Coffee Shop and the American Restaurant, where they were refused service.

A crowd of villagers gathered outside the restaurants and there were attempts to open the doors of the automobiles of Lincoln men when they left the establishments. State troopers appeared, however, and the crowd thinned out.

Curfew for Students

To avoid the possibility of physical conflict, Lincoln students have discontinued nightly visits to the borough's establishments.

Crowl, who had five students arrested when they refused to move to a segregated section of the theatre recently, has closed the movie house "pending developments."

Burgess Holcombe dismissed four of the students and fined the other $10 on a disorderly conduct charge for taking a flash picture of the incident in the movie.

He said he had thought of resigning after the hearing, but decided against it—"at this time anyway"—because it would look as though I were yellow."

"The law is the law," Dr. Holcombe declared, "and there is no question in my mind regarding the constitutionality of the law—I want to make that clear."

Burgess in the Middle

He asserted that his dual role of burgess and trustee more or less put him in the middle.

Before the hearing, he said, he received a letter from Lincoln men charging that police arrests of the students were made with his consent "even though I didn't issue the warrant."

After the hearing, borough residents, he said, accused him of "looking out for Lincoln."

He denied that Dr. Horace Mann Bond, president of Lincoln, had influenced him to change his mind about resigning, as had been reported in some quarters.

"I talked with Dr. Bond," the burgess said, "but he didn't ask me to stay on. We are good friends and I admire him as one of the outstanding educators of the country, colored or white, although at times we don't see eye to eye."

In referring to "loopholes" in the current campaign, Dr. Holcombe said that a number of students had made reservations at the Oxford Hotel.

"They were told the reservations would be made, but no one showed up to use the rooms. Lincoln people later offered to pay for the rooms, but the owner declined to accept the money because he had rented the accommodations after a reasonable time.

"But you see, this looked as though the students were trying to bring on a controversy rather than have things settled," he said, adding; "These are the sort of things that are being flaunted at me by the critics of Lincoln students."

Dr. Holcombe continued:

"I believe that if one or two boys had dropped in at the Oxford Coffee Shop, everything would have been okay. If there had been trouble, it would have been ironed out.

"It is not characteristic of college boys to go to the movies or the restaurant in groups of 16 or 17; and the people are of the opinion that the youngsters are looking for trouble.

"I had been assured that there would have been no objection at the Met (a theatre that plays mostly westerns) and if a different course had been pursued, the Oxford Theatre would have had to accept the situation or close down."

Many Rumors Afloat

"As things stand now," Dr. Holcombe said, "the area is filled with rumors that have no basis in fact but aggravate the situation;

"For example, there is a story circulating that if the matter is not straightened out by Feb. 7, the Lincoln student body is coming to town en masse and take over Oxford.

"That, of course, is ridiculous. I know we don't have that type of student body at Lincoln.

"Then somehow it has gotten around that I said: in the event of trouble, I would refuse police protection. Ridiculous also. Our police department will protect the public—regardless of race or color."

Dr. Holcombe, who has been burgess for 16 years and a Lincoln trustee for 15, said he helped resolve the question of segregation in the borough schools two years ago.

Segregation Fight Christian Duty

PHILADELPHIA

In an exclusive interview with St. near South, denied the charge, the AFRO last week, Dr. Horace Mann Bond, president of Lincoln University, said he was in full accord with Lincoln students in their all-out fight to break down segregation in Oxford.

Taking the view that racial discrimination is one of the great evils in the world today and blocks the extension of Christianity, President Bond has issued this week a detailed statement of his position n the current struggle.

Prexy's Statement Cted

Dr. Bond pointed out that:

"It is the duty of an American to assure for himself and for all other citizens the equal protection of the law; and he is obligated to do so under due process of law.

"The Lincoln University board of trustees has as yet had no opportunity to review the situation in Oxford, although it was pointed out that the board favors an institution open to all persons without discrimination as to race, creed or color.

"It is the duty of the Chrstian to work against evil. He is under an obligation to do so with no hatred in his heart toward the evil-doer; and to do so without violence,

Foundation Stones

"The university administration tries to conduct its affairs on two broad principles. The first, that the university should be thoroughly Christian in ideals and deeds. The second, that it should raise up men strong in their faith and adherence to the American way of life.

"The students participating in the Oxford incidents have pledged themselves to live up to these high principles. They oppose evil; they are pledged neither to offer nor to return violence; to suffer violence without returning it,—always looking to the law for their protection.

"If there has been thought and talk of violence, it is not in the minds and hearts of Lincoln students.

"The Lincoln administration believes that this is a Christian point of view.

"American Point of View"

"The students have been urged, and they have agreed to conduct themselves within the framework of the laws of the Boro of Oxford, the laws of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the Constitution of the United States.

"The Lincoln administration believes that this is an American point of view.

"It is not in my heart to tell the students of this university, that their faith in orderly, peaceful, non-violent, Christian and American principles of action are without merit."

IN MEMORY

DR. BERNARD N. HATCHER

In memory of the late Dr. B. N. Hatcher who departed this life January 29, 1949;

Those who knew him loved him, because of the exceptional personality he possessed. He was loved by all who came in contact with him, and was always willing and never too busy to hear what one had to say, and to give the best he had; to point one to God as their only refuge in time of trouble. He was a great humanitarian. The community lost in his passing—he died as he lived—everyone's friend.

These few descriptive words would never tell the story of his life, and what he meant to those who knew him:

Deep in my heart lies a picture of a loved one laid to rest.
In memory's frame I shall keep it,
because he was one of the best.
There is a sad, but sweet remembrance;
There is a memory fond and true;
There is a token of affection, Dear
Husband, and a heartache still for you.

Appearing before Magistrate Julius A. Romano in Western District police court, Samuel Bryant, 26, 600 block W. Franklin St., was sentenced to a 60-day term for striking Mrs. Glydon Bryant, his wife, on Thursday.

After her husband had been returned to the cell block, waiting to be taken to City Jail, Mrs. Bryant decided she would need some money while he was in jail. So, Bryant was brought back into the courtroom; and the desk sergeant gave him $70 that had been taken from him by police when he was arrested.

Mrs. Bryant, with their baby cuddled in one arm, held out her free hand and Mr. Bryant, befuddled by it all, scratched his head After debating to himself a few minutes, hubby handed over $20 and went back to the cell to do his 60 days.

American Women Miss Out on Human Relations, Is Charge

The women of Europe think that American women miss out on human relations, Dr. Flemmie Kittrell, national president of the National Association of College Women, told the Baltimore branch, here, Saturday.

Dr. Kittrell, with Miss Bertha McNeill of Washington and Mrs. Nellie N. Taylor of Wilmington, Del., were guest participants on a symposium on "Women in Western Europe and Peace" when the group celebrated National Day.

All three of the speakers had been travelers in Europe the past year, when they had attended the conference of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom in Switzerland, and visited other countries on the Continent.

Hunger Present

Dr. Kittrell pointed out that European women were so concerned with the immediate problems of hunger and want that they had little time for organized work for peace as have Americans, but that they are putting on all the pressure they can to prevent another war. Mrs. Taylor said that she had found a significant lack of religious feeling in Europe, but Miss McNeil pointed out that while the churches went unused there were many smaller communities that still clung to their hope in religion.

Mrs. Cotton Plays

Other participants on the program included Mrs. John Cotton, who sang and played; Mrs. Mary W. Griffin, who gave as the meditation, James Weldon Johnson's "The Creation." Mrs. Viola C. Afro Editor Speaks at Friends School

"Journalism as a Career" was the subject of a talk given Wednesday by William I. Gibson, AFRO editor, before the Friends School assembly.

Mr. Gibson pointed out that in spite of radio and television and the death of many newspapers, the newspaper field still offers many opportunities for employment as well as for community servcie.

"There always will be room," he said, "for the well-trained individual who, in addition has native abiltiy and the will to work hard."

He said that there was little danger that newspapers will ever be replaced as communications media in the United States, or, for that matter, in the entire world.
