The Hunter Soon to Be Hunted

Juano Hernandez, star of "Intruder in the Dust," which opens at the Harlem Theatre, Feb. 15, is shown in one of the thrilling scenes from the film, just before he is accused of a murder he did not commit.

Intruder Stalks Harlem Square Creating Terror

By E. B. REA

The whine of bullets fired from the ghostly shadows of Harlem Square, in the vicinity of Edmondson Ave. and Gilmor St., sent pedestrians scurrying to the nearest shelter on Thursday night.

Added to this were the baying and barking, of dogs; terrifying screams of women and children; cursing voices of half-frightened men, and the whine of sirens as armed cars sped to the scene to investigate the disorder.

With shots peppering a nearby movie house, theatre patrons stood or huddled in silent terror of a man, who waited alone in the night. A stranger, with murder in his heart.

Gaunt Figure of a Man

For there he stood, a gaunt figure of a man with a gun silhouetted against the cold and dreary looking Fabrigary sky, defiant of law and order and cold to the stormy emotions that he had caused to sweep over the neighborhood.

Vain efforts were made to spotlight the killer with beaming headlights and spotlights from the hundreds of autos that had converged on the surrounding streets.

He was definitely a killer. An unidentified murder victim's body had been spotted near the edge of the square, and the finger of guilt pointed to the unknown gunman on the scene of the crime.

Defied Would-Be Captors

Loud speakers were set up, sending the booming voices of those who were laying a trap for him, to come out with his hands up.

Bystanders heard his defying curses, followed by another whine of bullets, which rattled against nearby houses.

Women screamed and men ducked for any cover they could find. More cars drove up and parked at a safe distance, but no one dared approach the murky shadows, knowing full well that death lurked there.

Lynch-Bent Crowd

As the evening grew on, with tenseness mounting and cries of "Lynch Him! Lynch Him!" began to rent the air as the crowd, with its patience worn to a frazzle plotted how to surprise the killer and bring him out dead or alive.

But, it was an unknown courageous old lady, who defied the crowd and braved sudden death as she slowly made her way through the shadows in the direction of the man.

All was deathly silent for a moment. But then, the truth dawned upon the fetes of the crowd.

This mystery, violence, terror and passion, which had whipped the neighborhood into a frenzy, was just a writer's way of telling about some of the preconceived highlights in the film, "Intruder in the Dust," opening Wednesday, Feb. 15, at the Harlem Theatre.

Family Wants Maid 'Like Beulah on Radio'

RICHMOND

Apparently a number of Richmonders are disturbed by a "help wanted" ad that appeared in both local dailies here this week, placed by a local white family who desires the services of a maid to live-on the premises—one like "Beulah on the radio."

Text of the advertisement, which appeared under the heading, "Help Wanted, Female (c)," follows:

"MAID—Live in, small family, work not hard. Would like one like Beulah on the radio. 6-2381 or 5-7384."

The AFRO had received a "gang" of calls up to prestime, most callers indicating a desire to inform the authors of the ad that maids like Beulah exist only on the radio and the "Land of Make Believe;" that Beulah in person, off the radio, wouldn't fill their bill.

Lincoln Award Given Dr. Grim

LINCOLN UNIVERSITY, Pa. — Dr. Harold F. Grim, dean and professor of biology at Lincoln University for 38 years, received the Abraham Lincoln award at the annual Founder's Day Dinner here Wednesday night in the Hotel Bellevue-Stratford.

The award was made as a tribute to Dr. Grim's record of having trained over 13% of the nation's colored physicians. Dr. E. P. Roberts, New York City's oldest practicing colored physician and a graduate of the class of 1891, received a similar award.

"I would be selfish not to deem this testimonial as a broad recognition of the wholehearted and efficient support of the Lincoln University faculty, working under trying financial conditions, limited equipment, and personnel," was Dean Grim's reply to the presentation.

Dr. Roberts, who received his award by proxy, is now 81 years old and is the oldest colored physician in active practice in NYC.

Speakers at the banquet, commemorating Lincoln's 96th year of service to the Medical Sciences, included Dr. Robin C. Buerki, vice-president of the University of Pennsylvania in charge of medical affairs, who discussed modern methods in medical education.

Dr. Peter Marshall Murray, member of the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association, spoke on the contribution of the Liberal Arts College to Medical Education.

Concords and Discords

By W. LLEWELLYN WILSON

Lovers of serious sacred music ever and anon turn their attention to the inspired music of Felix Mendelssohn's oratorios "St. Paul" and his dramatic opus "Elijah."

Both of these works have been essayed by local choral societies.

At present a group of singers are meeting Saturday evenings at Bethel AME Church chapel to study "St. Paul." The ensemble works from 8:30 to 10:00 p.m.

Interested choral singers from other choirs are invited to join the group.

The score vividly retells the story of the tragic happenings surrounding the important feature portrayed in the life of Saul of Taursus, who was at one time an avowed enemy of the Lord Jesus Christ and who after his miraculous conversion, became a great disciple.

The Women's Club of Douglas Memorial Community Center will present The Mariners, a racially-mixed group of singers, in a concert at the church on Sunday, Feb. 26, at 4:00 p.m.

The Peerless Glee Club, the oldest in the point of service, and one of the groups which always has held high musical standards, is still going strong.

At presents, Edward Bush is director and Marion Gibson accompanist. Cornelius Levi, well-known singer and trouper, is treasurer.

In all the years the organization has served the local community and always has maintained its very high standard of sterling musicianship.

Some years ago it decisively won a vocal contest in which the best male singing groups competed, including the Post Office Glee Club an excellent ensemble of the time.

The Post Office Glee Club now functions as the Baltimore Singers, of which Gerald B. Wilson is director.
