BLANCHE HILLEN JONES

Silhouettes adorned the wall, the lights were low and sweet melodious music flowed over the colonial designed ballroom.

White corinthian columns flanked each side of the room, at their massive bases were found wide green palms, and in a better contrast, blue draperies were hung loosely and gracefully from each window.

In the reception room there were tables for two and frappes were served.

This was the night of the Sigma Yeta ball at the Morgan Christian Center.

The queen of this "gown and tails" affair was Virginia Briscoe, a Morgan senior. Virginia was beautifully adorner in a white gown set attractively off by white pearl accessories. She was presented with a blue overnight bag by her Zeta sorors.

A mardi gras ball for Morgan State Scholarships was given by the Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority at the Elks Home the same eve. Hilah Brown, queen of Morgan, member of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority and a senior was chosen as the mardi gras queen.

Her attendants Barbara Ward, Marion and Margaret Spriggs marveled at Hilah's beautiful white brocade organdy gown, and her rhinestone necklace with ear rings of the same, while her crown matched exactly with the sparkling accessories.

In the absence of Jackson Glaze of Lincoln, Thomas Brown served as Hilah's "king". An elaborate ceremony to okplace and each attendant was presented with old fashioned bouquets and gift cards.

File Anti-Bias Law Test Case

Restaurant Refuses to Serve 3 in Group

WASHINGTON

Only one week elapsed since the District Commissioners informed downtown restaurateurs that the Law of 1872 forbidding them to discriminate against patrons by race in service of food was "in effect," before a case arose to test the judicial value of the 78-year-old statute.

On Tuesday of this week, the Corporation Counsel's office was brought a case of restaurant discrimination against persons because of their race by one of seven teams that had been visiting eating places in the District to test the "lost" law ever since the Commissioners' opinion was broadcast.

The complaint was lodged by an interracial party of four, three of whom were refused service at Thompson's Restaurant at 720 Fourteenth St., N.W., earlier that day, the one white member of the party being the only person served.

Clear Case of Bias

The group included the Rev. A. F. Elmes, pastor of Peoples Congregational Church; Dr. Mary Church Terrell, 86-year-old educator; Miss Essie Thompson, member of the United Cafeteria Workers Union; and David H. Scull of the Society of Friends.

The four persons went through the line at the cafeteria, but their way out was blocked by S. W. Becker, who identified himself as superintendent of the Thompson's Restaurants in Washington and Baltimore.

Becker told the white member of the group, Mr. Scull, that he could buy food, but that the other three "cannot be served, because it is the rule."

Suit Filed Immediately

Following the refusal, the four went immediately to the office of Clark King, assistant corporation counsel, in the Municipal Court Building, accompanied by Mrs. Margaret Haywood, legal representative of the group. They at once made out affidavits.

Two other white women, who did not reveal their identity, also went to the Corporation Counsel's office as witnesses.

Dr. Terrell was a member of the group that was refused service at Thompson's on Jan. 27. Shortly afterward they filed complaints with the Corporation Counsel, which led to the speeding up of an opinion on the legal status of the 78-year-old law.

The Corporation Counsel had been "studying" the law since last May, when the local chapter of the National Lawyers Guild filed an opinion asking that it be enforced.

Cafe Group Opposes Law

Immediately after the group left the restaurant, Tuesday, Becker, the Thompson's Restaurant superintendent, telephoned Robert J. Wilson, executive secretary of the Washington Restaurant Association.

The association had advised its members to continue their segregation policies until the court declared whether or not the statute was valid.

Assistant Corporation Counsel King could not give the AFRO any word on whether or not Tuesday's complaint would be used as the District's "test" of the 1872 law.

Feels Case May Be "Test"

He stated that he had not looked the affidavits over, because he was called to a Congressional hearing on Tuesday and his office was short handed on Wednesday.

However, he added, he felt reasonably certain that the incident would be used to get a judicial opinion on whether the anti-discrimination law of 1872 is still enforceable.

Until the ruling is made, no further complaints will be prosecuted by District officials.

Quartet's Attorney in 'Lost' Law Test Case Threatened

An anonymous telephone caller threatened Margaret Haywood Hawthorne, attorney for the four persons denied service at Thompson's Restaurant, Wednesday.

According to Mrs. Hawthorne, the telephone terrorist intimated "the KKK will get you" if she continued her work in the anti-discrimination case. Was she frightened? "Why, of course not. One expects such crackpots in cases like this," she asserted.

4 From Amityville Die in L. I. Crash

NEW YORK (ANP)—Four colored persons were listed among the 29 dead in the Long Island railroad commuter trains head-on crash, Friday night at Rockville Centre. They were all of Amityville, a settlement about 20 miles south of Manhattan.

The quartette were Jefferson Allen, and his father, Charles; Harry A. Tostent and Edward McBride. Among the heroes of the wreck was the pastor of a Baptist church, the Rev. Howe B. Perry, whose church served as a morgue immediately after the wreck.

Jefferson Allen was to have been married the day of the wreck which was blamed on Engineer Jacob Kiefer's running through a red light into the single track on which

Paul Robeson, Mrs. Lawson Elected by Progressives

Wallace Tells Convention Delegates 'Party Stands for Liberties for All'

CHICAGO. — Paul Robeson, concert singer, actor and lecturer, was elected co-chairman, and Mrs. Senora Lawson, of Richmond, Va., named one of two vice-chairmen among other officers elected at the closing session of the Progressive Party convention held here last week.

Elmer Benson, former Democratic Senator from Minnesota, was re-elected chairman of the party for another two years.

The three-day convention was highlighted by a speech by former Vice-President Henry A. Wallace, who urged delegates to make it clear they are not being run from Moscow.

In his address, aired over ABC network, Wallace said:

"Since the construction of the hydrogen bomb has become the most serious problem in the world today, we must cast aside our normal partisanship in the face of impending disaster. We must make it possible for all those in the country who believe in the necessity of and the possibility of peaceful settlement of the problem of atomic energy as a weapon of war, to rally to one banner where their united voice can be made effective.

Civil Liberties for All

"This rallying point can be the Progressive party . . . a new, broader, forward-looking party.

"We must now supersede our prejudices with reason. We must allow our minds to seek new means of achieving the common goals of humanity . . ."

He reiterated the platform policy that the Progressive party stands for civil liberties for all.

"Civil liberties, like peace, are invisible," he said. "We believe in civil liberties in Eastern Europe, but we recognize that except in the case of Czechoslovakia, there has been on democratic tradition on which to build. We known that civil liberties will rapidly disappear in the United States as the cold war is fanned into a white heat by H-bomb planning."

The keynote address of the convention was delivered by Earl B. Dickerson of Chicago, former president of the National Bar Association, who also chaired some of the sessions.

Among other speakers were Elmer Benson, Paul Robeson, Rep. Vito Marcantonio of New York, who made a report on the FEPC fight in Congress.
