Jungle Film Heads New Albert Program

The story of "Zamba," Eagle Lion jungle drama, now playing at the New Albert Theatre, is based on tales of natives in the Belgian Congo of gorillas that have come out of the jungles to raid villages and steal native children to replace those of their own which have died, according to its producer, Maurice Conn.

The cast includes Jon Hall, June Vincent, George Cooper, Jane Nigh George O'Hanlon and Beau Bridges.

One of the most spectacular and colorful periods in the winning of the West is brought to life in "Powder River Rustler," starring popular Allan "Rocky" Lane, the second feature.

The flaming mid-1800's when the West was torn asunder by ferocious outlaws and bands of desperadoes who instituted reigns of terror throughout the region, is a thrilling background for Rocky's new sager.

Mail Filled With Seals for Easter Sale Drive

Mail bags containing Easter Seals flooded the post office this week for the opening of the annual Easter Seal Sale of the Maryland Society for Crippled Children and Adults and its affiliates, including the Maryland League for Crippled Children.

Drama at New Albert

One of the many startling scenes in "Zamba," jungle drama, now showing at the New Albert along with "Powder River Rustlers," a thrill-packed western.

Robbie Named in Film Suit

LOS ANGELES—Jackie Robinson, making his initial venture in pictures, has been made party to a suit filed by Louis Polock, a screen writer.

Pollock who claims that the idea for the picture, "The Life of Jackie Robinson," is his, contends that he collaborated with scriptwriter Lawrence Taylor in putting the idea on paper.

For this, Pollock is asking five per cent of the take on the picture. Named with Robinson in the suit are the two film companies, Jewel Pictures Corporation, and Eagle-Lion Films, distributors.

Bishop Hurst's Widow Better by Convalescent Home Care

The 79-year-old widow of AME Bishop John Hurst, who was placed in a convalescent home recently, after being found living in "filth and squalor," has responded to her new environment "nicely," it was revealed this week.

"I was simply delighted with her condition," Policewoman Violet H. Whyte said, after visiting the "deprived" widow, Mrs. K. Bertha Hurst.

"She seems at times to be almost normal, and her grandson has co-operated splendidly," the policewoman added.

Grandson Haled Into Court

The grandson, John Hurst 11, 27, appeared in Northwestern police court on Jan. 26 to answer a charge of neglect lodged by Policewoman Whyte.

The policewoman accused the young man of being responsible for the "pitiful" surroundings his grandmother was subjected to at her home in the 1000 block W. Lafayette Ave.

Described at the hearing as having the mind of a small child, Mrs. Hurst was placed in the convalescent home two days later, in the hope that in a desirable environment, she would improve.

To Stay in Home

Placed in the home on a one-month trail basis, the widow will remain there indefinitely, in view of her rapid improvement.

Bishop Hurst, prominent in church circles, had charge of AME churches, first in all of Florida and later in South Carolina.

The Lafayette Ave. home, where his widow's plight was discovered, was at one time a palatial mansion and one of the show places of Baltimore.

New Trade School Inspection Invited

The new vocational school for veterans and other adults at 2226 N. Howard St. will be opened for inspection and registration on Monday, the Division of Vocational Education for Adults announced, this week.

The new school, known as Vocational School No. 458, will offer courses in radio and television service and commercial art, including show card and sign painting.

The radio and television courses will be under the direction of Jack Barnette, amateur radio operator and service man.

Lynde Jordon, sign painter and, display artist, will head the commercial art department.

Classes will be held from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. and from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. five days a week.

Parents' Aid Enlisted in Reducing Accidents

Concerned with the needless suffering of school children in traffic accidents, the Department of Education is enlisting the aid of parents in a safety campaign.

Parents are being urged to learn traffic rules and heed them, thus setting an example for their children. The youngsters are to be taught to realize that they must rely upon themselves.

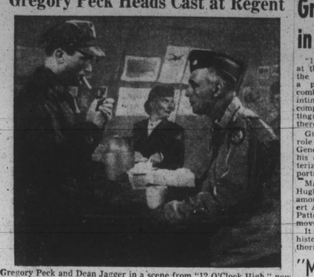
Gregory Peck Heads Cast at Regent



Gregory Peck and Dean Jagger in a scene from "12 O'Clock High," now playing the Regent.

Gregory Peck in Regent Film

"12 O'Clock High," top feature at the Regent, is the "Wings" of the second World War. It is also a powerful entertainment that combines sweeping spectacle and intimate drama to create the most compelling, important and distinguished of all the air thrillers there have been.

Gregory Peck, in the starring role of Bomb Group Commander General Frank Savage, troops into his catalogue of masterly characterizations his newest and finest portrait.

Many new faces—Broadway's Hugh Marlowe and Gary Merrill among them, and youngsters Robert Arthur, John Kellogg and Bob Patten—make their first, telling movie marks in this film.

It tells an honest, forceful and historic story with integrity, authority and wisdom.

"Man on the Eiffel Tower" Playing Met

Jean Wallace and Robert Hutton are romantic factors in "The Man on the Eiffel Tower," an Irving Allen-Franchot Tone Production photographed in Ansco Color.

They are co-starred with Charles Laughton, Franchot Tone, Burgess Meredith, Patricia Roc and Belita.

Getting a husband by statistics sparks the unique theme of Creel Productions' starring vehicle for Claudette Colbert, Robert Young and George Brent, "Bride for Sale," the second feature.

In this romantic comedy, Miss Colbert portrays the trimly efficient manager of a big income tax firm, who has decided it is time for her to marry.

Her prospective groom must be wealthy, and to find him she searches through the private records of the firm's clients for the most likely candidates.

Scandalized when he learns what is going on, her boss, Brent, tries to break her campaign by gulling his old college pal Young, to teach her a lesson. But the counter-plan doesn't work out as scheduled, and the outcome provides plenty of fun for picturegoers.

Detective Drama Met Headliner

Romance and a manhunt vie for audience interest in "The Man on the Eiffel Tower," the Irving Allen-Franchot Tone Production photographed in Ansco Color with a distinguished cast of stars, now playing the Met.

Charles Laughton, Franchot Tone, Burgess Meredith, Robert Hutton, Jean Wallace, Patricia Roc and Belita have the top roles in this exciting film.

Efforts by an enterprising girl to select a husband by high-efficiency methods are developed in the gay theme of "Bride for Sale," starring Claudette Colbert, Robert Young and George Brent, the co-feature.

Miss Colbert takes a job as office manager of Brent's big income-tax and accounting firm, her real purpose is to prospect for a husband with the best financial rating. Brent cooks up a scheme to cure Miss Colbert of her matrimonial ideas, but the scheme backfires in hilarious fashion.
