Baltimore Medical Group Hears Dr. Howard Payne

Dr. Howard Payne, director of Freedmen's Hospital Annex, tuberculosis section, was the speaker at the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty Library of Maryland (Cathedral St.) Wednesday evening at the invitation of the chest section of the Baltimore Medical Society.

He discussed tuberculosis in colored people, told of the care of TB in general and stressed the need for closer relationship between doctors and social workers. He said they must work as a team.

Dr. Payne pointed out also that some patients stay in bed too long. He cited a case of one who was in bed for two years and pointed out that physicians should try to get patients out of bed as soon as possible, based, of course, on individual cases.

There should be a vocational rehabilitation center in Maryland for tuberculosis patients, he said, to enable a person with a mild case of TB, who was doing heavy work before his illness, to be studied by the center and given a job he could hold.

This is the kind of thing, he said, which comes about by team work with doctors and social workers.

Doctors Must Teach

Stressing the importance of doctors teaching patients about their illness and not leaving it to the social worker, he said that too often the physician puts stress on the X-ray or laboratory tests and simply points out to a patient that he has a spot on his lung.

It would be far better according to Dr. Payne, to give him a good medical history and help him understand his ailment. In that way, the patient, he said, can help the doctor help him.

Among those attending the meeting were Drs. Maceo Williams, Louis E. Harmon, Dudley Lee, Frederick Adams and George Adams.

Residents Clear Up Debris After Beserk Man's Rampage

For a few moments last Sunday afternoon, Albert Tibbs was an all-powerful destroyer, wrecking everything in his path as he began a mad dance on the housetops of Ashburton St.—a dance that ended in death.

Brick by brick, Tibbs set out to tear down his bizarre dance floor with his bare hands, but was halted by a bullet from a police-man's pistol.

Wrecked 11 Chimneys

Berserk, this ordinarily mild-mannered young man had managed to tear down chimneys on 11 homes in the 1800 block, smash nine skylights and pull several water pipes loose from their moorings.

Five police cars, two fire engines and an ambulance were required at the scene.

By Wednesday, residents of the block were slowly getting their homes in order.

Mrs. Zadie Simon, who lived next door to Tibbs at 1822 Ashburton St., had just talked to an insurance investigator as a reporter arrived.

"I can't have any fire until our chimney is repaired," she said. "If this keeps up, my children might catch colds."

Insurance Men Busy

Her conversation was interupted by visits of two other insurance salesmen who must have felt this block of Ashburton ready for prop erty damage insurance.

Mrs. Simon told them she al ready had such coverage, then re sumed her conversation.

"Luckily there was a metal plate under the bathroom ceiling or he would have crashed right through there.

"I wasn't home at the time but my children were. They became panicky when he began tearing everything up. My sisterinlaw fainted.

Glass Scared Them

"When all that glass from the skylight smashed, they really became frightened."

Tibbs had been shot down on the stairway of Walter Dorsey Jr.'s home at 1808 Ashburton St., eight homes away from his own quarters.

"We weren't in the house when he was shot." Mr. Dorsey said tersely. "The roof is almost fixed now and other damage is being repaired. He didn't do too much damage.

"No, I didn't know him."

Did Not Know Him

Mrs. Simon did not know him either, "except to nod at."

A young woman staying at the home where Tibbs had a room stated that he seemed "a nice man. I liked him."

Didn't Bother Home

"He didn't bother this roof too much, maybe it was because he lived here."

Debris was still on rooftops, bricks thrown down by Tibbs had been partially cleared away. Chunks of mortar were visible in several flower beds.

Workmen were on some of the roofs. The street was gradually becoming quiet and normal after Tibbs's tour of destruction.

The Rooftop 'Samson'— What Made Him Run?

Who was Albert Tibbs, the roof-top rampager, and what made him run?

He was a 26-year-old Virginian who had come to Baltimore after the war. He had been in the service, a soldier, and until his house-top wreckage Sunday had been employed by the Glenn L. Martin company.

With his wife, May, a Baltimorean, Tibbs had lived at the Ashburton house for about eight months.

Had Become Irritable

Though never having gone berserk before Sunday, Tibbs, according to relatives, had become increasingly irritable in recent weeks.

His behavior made his wife leave and stay with her mother at an apartment in the 1500 block McCulloh St. The Tibbses had no children.

His relatives here were not notified by police of his seizure and shooting until the next day.

Was Dissatisfied

The war, the problems involved in establishing a home and general dissatisfaction were considered possible factors behind his derangement.

A quiet man, Tibbs had a tendency to brood. His sister-in-law said. "I think he wanted something, a home perhaps, or a better job, something that worried him until he just couldn't take it any more.

Father Near Death

His father, it was reported, is near death at the Tibbs rural Virginia home and is said to have been victim of a mental seizure also.

Whatever the reasons are behind Tibbs mad destructive flight across the rooftops, it is certain that in the half hour he terrorized Ashburton St., Tibbs's derangment for a time lifted him above the common-place and made him feel like the center of the universe.

"He had the strength of a giant," one witness said, who had watched the mild-mannered young man rip chimneys to bits.

1st '52 Burglary Foiled, Man Held

While others were bringing in the New Year at parties and clubs, William Moore was said to have been busy ransacking a dry-cleaning shop.

Radio car officers, at a hearing in Northwestern police court, told how they found Moore, 22, of the 700 block N. Mount St., inside the store piling up clothes prior to taking them away. Time: 2:30 a.m. New Year's Day.

Door Open

The police had been cruising in the 600 N. Fulton Ave. when they spotted the store door open. Entering it was reported, they discovered Moore surrounded by clothing.

The defendant was ordered held for court under $1000 bail.

The governor, the mayor and other city and State executives have been invited to participate on the program. Music will be furnished by the Masonic Choir, the Morgan Chorus, and Miss Anne Wallace, soprano soloist.

Lured From Home, Man Robbed In His Own Car

A fake message from a friend was the bait that lured a man out of his house and into a kidnap-robbery by two acquaintances who were later apprehended.

In Northwestern police court Thursday, John Doyle, of 1112 Argyle Ave., charged Clevis E. Nelson, 40, of the 1500 block Argyle Ave., and John Coates, 29, of the 100 S. Fremont Ave., with assault and armed robbery. His wallet, with $74, was taken.

Lured Him From House

The duo, according to Doyle, had come to his house late on the night of Dec. 29 and told him that a friend wanted him right away.

They got into his car with him and whipped guns at Myrtle and Dolphin Sts. where the robbery took place. The defendants were said to have then ordered Doyle to drive on.

Finally, at Gilmor and Presstman Sts., the robbers got out and were picked up by a man driving a black sedan with Ohio tags.

Third Man Held

This third man, police say, is D. Arthur Ellis, 23, alias Ellis Deauthu, of Cleveland, who is being held as an acessory to the crime.

All three are being held for court action under $1000 bail each.

Ignored Rider Gets 'Hungry Hack' Fined

A cab-driver who wanted to eat lunch just as he was hailed by a man with an invalid wife was fined $5 and costs in Northwestern police court Thursday for refusing to transport passengers.

Thomas Smoot, of 1627 Lorman Ct., told Magistrate John L. Berry, that he had asked taxi-man Robert J. Johnson, 28, of 1611 Lorman Ct., to take him to University Hospital.

His wife was ill and unable to walk for any distance, said Smoot, Johnson, who had parked his cab, refused, saying "It's lunchtime."

A taxi bureau detective informed the court that cab-drivers were not allowed by law to take time off for meals when on active duty.

Johnson, was fined and released.

Patrolman Held In Tibbs Killing

Patrolman John Popp, white, of the Northwestern district, who shot Albert Tibbs, the man who ran wild on Ashburton St. last Sunday, has been suspended from duty and is, charged with causing Tibbs death, the date for his hearing has been set.

Tibbs, 26, of 1824 Ashburton St., died in Provident Hospital on Monday after being shot in the hip and right hand.

Patrolman Popp, who wounded the man as he approached him on a stairway at 1808 Ashburton St., during the melee, was released in the custody of Capt. Millard Horton, Northwestern district chief.

Tibbs continued to resist after being wounded and in his half-hour rampage had torn up chimneys with his bare hands.

Funeral services for Tibbs will be held at 11 a.m. Monday at the Katie Williams Funeral Home and burial will be in National Cemetery.
