$100.00 to the second prize winner, $50 to the third prize winner and $5 to each the next 17 finalists.

The tremendous job of screening all eptrants has been placed in the hands of five prominent local citizens. They are:

Dr. Talmadge Pinkney, of the pediatrics staff at Provident Hospital; Dr. Effie Ellis, head pediatrician at Provident; Mrs. Iona Collins, director, Little School; Mrs. Victorine Adams, president, Women's Democratic Club and J. Nelson Fortune, advertising manager, Baltimore AFRO.

Results of the final judging will be carried in the June 4 edition of the AFRO together with pictures of the top three finalists.

Readers are asked not to phone for results until after the contest winners have been announced. This information will not be released by the judges until we go to press on that date.

THE TREMENDOUS interest shown by our readers in this contest last year was only a clue to the enthusiastic response this second annual event would create.

In an effort to find the healthiest Carnation - fed baby of 1955 in Baltimore, the Carnation Company of Los Angeles, Calif., has again centered attention on the high standards of infant care that have been attained throughout the community.

For many years, Carnation has been making contributions to the improvement of formula feeding.

Much has been accomplished by close cooperation with the medical profession and, particularly, by recognizing the vital role played by every doctor in the welfare of the community which he serves.

MANY DOCTORS report the gratifying results of the improved feeding methods being followed by parents who seek medical advice in the raising of their children.

Because the public is seldom made aware of this, the Carnation Company has been anxious to bring these developments to light by such community projects as the annual "Healthy Baby Contest."

Carnation consumer consultants in the field were quick to endorse this means because of the many healthy youngsters they find every day in carrying out their service to the homemakers and parents of the areas they serve.

siding at 24 N. Mount St., are the parents of five children. They will move into apartment 5A on the fifth floor at 200 N. Aisquith St.

By Wednesday morning their new neighbors will be Mr. and Mrs. Donald Woods, Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Perry, and Mrs. Faith Gough.

Their new home is located opposite the projects administration building. Five other 11-story apartment buildings are almost ready for occupancy.

Tenants for these buildings will sign their leases and move in within eight weeks.

ALREADY 64 families have moved into a group of three-story apartment buildings bounded by Caroline St., and Central Ave.

The project can accommodate 816 families when completed. Another group of 109 units, bounded by Fayette and Orleans is expected to be ready by the middle of June.

Some 500 persons visited the project during Open House on Monday. Invited at that time were public school children, teachers and representatives of civic and church groups.

On Wednesday, 150 more persons attended open house. They were mostly employees of the Baltimore Housing Authority.

THE PROJECT is managed by Van Story Branch. Walden Gorsuch is assistant manager and Arthur Murphy is management aide.

to work in the drug store and at home, using a part of her salary to keep up expenses and make improvements on the home.

She says that contrary to his expressed agreement and promise Dr. Greene neglected or failed to transfer within his lifetime or by will and instead died intestate.

She says that his kin had done nothing to aid or comfort the 69-year-old druggist, nor had they visited him during his life.

Immediately upon his death, Miss Johnson says, she was pre-emptorily ordered to leave the house and companies were advised to cut off gas and electric and telephone service.

In three weeks, she said, Mrs. Hall had sold the property at private sale without efforts to secure the highest bidders as required by court.

MISS JOHNSON HAS ASKED the court to issue an order restraining Mrs. Hall from selling, transferring or disposing of the property at 2521 McCulloh St.

She asks that the property be conveyed to her, or in the event of failure to convey, that a trustee be appointed to make such conveyance.

Judge Michael J. Manley signed a order requiring the defendant to show cause why Miss Johnson's request should not be granted.

In the meantime, he placed a restraining order against Mrs. Hall's disposal of the property.

W. A. C. Hughes is attorney for Miss Johnson. Mrs. Hall and the estate are represented by William Murphy, attorney.

N.C. fugitive who saved $2,000 may be returned

James "The Saver" Harris, who entrusted $2,000 to police when arrested last March on a gun charge, is awaiting a decision from North Carolina on whether he has to go back and complete a 25-30-year jail sentence for second-degree murder.

Harris, alias Willie Gary Jeffries, who has been operating a store on South Shaarp St. for 12 years, will be returned, Maryland officials say, if North Carolina still wants him.

Husband gets 3 yrs. in slaying of wife

Became enraged when he found her entertaining another man

"I loved her. Nobody else can ever take her place."

These words were spoken by Hezekiah Allen in Criminal Court Thursday, shortly before he was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary for manslaughter in the fatal beating of his wife.

The 32-year-old man told Judge Joseph Byrnes: "I guess I'm going to always hurt from that (her death) as long as I live."

Allen seemed to be deeply moved as he recalled the events that led to the death of his wife, Mrs. Blanche Allen.

THE CONSTRUCTION worker said that at about 3 a.m. on April 10, he arrived at his home in the 300 block W. Hoffman St. and found his wife with another man.

He said that during the fight which followed the other man fled. He added he used his fists and a strap to punish his wife.

"Then I put her to bed," Allen said, "and a little while later she made a sound and I asked her if she wanted to go to the hospital."

The wife was pronounced dead at University Hospital.

JUDGE BYRNES said that Allen's reaction of anger "was a natural one for a good husband."

The jurist concluded that "regardless of the great provocation," Allen would have to pay a penalty for his act and imposed the three-year term.

DISCOVERY OF THE body was made by the Franklins' oldest daughter, who found her mother in the cellar.

Franklin was arrested a short time later and charged in his wife's death.

Following this, Cole, named as the other man, told an AFRO reporter that he had been in love with Mrs. Franklin. He admitted that he had quarreled with the husband about her.

At the time of her death, Mrs. Franklin was employed in a sandwich shop on McMechen St., near Linden Ave. Mr. Franklin was an unemployed meat house worker at the time of the tragedy.

Woman fined $75 in cutting case

Miss Deloris S. Douglass, 23, of the 2000 block Windsor Ave., was fined $75 and costs at Northwestern Police Court Friday morning on charges of assaulting and cutting James Sutton, address unknown, during what police described as a drinking party Thursday.

Magistrate Linwood Koger Sr., also fined Miss Douglas $25 and costs for disturbing the peace, fine suspended. In addition, the defendant was placed on six-months probation.

SUTTON, THE victim, told the court that 14 stitches were required to close the wound. The weapon, which was not identified in court, also punctured one of Sutton's lungs.

Sutton, along with LeGrande Jenkins Jr., also of the 2000 block Windsor Ave., received dismissal verdicts on disturbance of the peace charges and were both place on "probation generally."

All defendants pleaded guilty.

Delegate to church meet in Honolulu

CAMDEN, N.J. — J. Arthur Jones of 706 N. 27th St., has been elected a lay-deputy to the Protestant Episcopal Church set for Sept. 4-17, inclusive, in Honolulu. He is one of four lay delegates from the New Jersey Diocese.

The election meeting was held in the Episcopal Cathedral, Trenton, May 3-4, and was presided over by the Rt. Rev. Alfred L. Banyard, bishop of the Diocese of New Jersey. Jones is the only person of his race elected from this area, and will probably be one among a few from the Continental United States whose elections are in keeping with the Episcopal edict of non-segregated churches.

FIRST IN 24—Walter Dixon, Maxwell Alpert and Solomon Liss, Democratic councilmen from the Fourth District take the oath of office at ceremonies in the council chamber, Thursday. Mr. Dixon who led this interracial ticket is the first colored councilman in 24 years.

—Dixon in

"How does it feel, Mr. Dixon?" a reporter asked following the ceremonies.

"It feels good," replied the man who led an interracial ticket that won the three Fourth District council seats in the May 3 general election.

"WE'RE HIS rooters," was the jubilant cry of a gathering of women, among whom were Mrs. Maxwell Alpert and Mrs. Solomon Liss, wives of Mr. Dixon's election running mates.

Calvin Douglass, attorney, and Furman Templeton, executive director of the Urban League, were also among the well-wishers who sat through the hour and forty minutes ceremonies that played to a full house.

Mr. Dixon entered the council chambers at 2:10 p.m. First person to shake his hand was another Dixon, William, Democratic leader.

WALTER DIXON, holder of six college degrees, looked the part of a man who will help run the sixth largest city in the U.S. He was immaculate in a blue suit, white shirt and blue tie. A red poppy was in his lapel.

Mrs. Dixon was stunning in a wide-brimmed black hat, a blue print dress and white gloves.

At 2:28 p.m., the council was called to order. Mr. Dixon was seated in the first row, third seat to the right of the rostrum. His Fourth District colleagues were at his left.

LEON ABRAMSON, incoming council president entered at 2:30 p.m. and the ceremonies got under way.

Mr. Dixon was among a committee of council members designated to escort Mayor and Mrs. Thomas D'Alesandro into the chambers.

Speeches were made by Mr. Abramson and Mayor D'Alesandro. C. Lyman Scheuler of the Fifth District was unanimously elected vice president of the council, succeeding Mr. Abramson.

Mr. Dixon's first official act, along with other council members, was the signing of the "payroll book." City councilmen serve for four years at a salary of $4,000 a year.

A bright sun illuminated the sidewalk outside of City Hall as the Dixons left. Mrs. Dixon carried a bouquet of flowers sent to the councilman by 24 persons as a "good luck" token to Baltimore's first colored councilman in 24 years.

THE REMAINING contestants included Judy Smith, 12, of Columbus, Ohio; and Robert E. McMahan, 12, of Knoxville, Tenn., in the national contest.

Robert was eliminated in the 10th round and Judy was eliminated in the 12th. The children said they learned 3,500 words in preparation for the bee.

JUDY SMITH tripped on the word, "syzygy," an astronomical term meaning the point of an orbit, as of the moon, at which the planet is in conjunction or opposition. She left out the second "y".

Robert McMann mispelled "fugue," a musical term meaning a polyphonic composition. He spelled it "fuige."

"I wouldn't have felt so bad if meerschaum had been on the list. I wanted to finish at least third," Gloria said.

She won the early eliminations at her school on April 6, and the state wide contest at City College in Baltimore on April 18 by out spelling 16 other finalists.
