Moments Musical

BY ADAH K. JENKINS

The 8th annual Fine Arts Festival at Morgan State College came to a triumphant conclusion last Wednesday with a joint concert.

Featured were the a cappella choir under the direction of J. O. B. Moseley, music department head, and the first symphony orchestra and string trio conducted by Rodney Mercado, of the music faculty.

THE CHORAL GROUP sang with pleasing style, "Italian Street Song," with the gifted soprano, Junetta Jones, as soloist.

The "Polovetsian Dance a nd "Prince Igor," proved to be one of the most striking c h o r a l works performed in this year's festival.

It is a complicated business, full of colorful and highly contrasting effects, exciting rhythms and the strong national flavor that characterizes the works of Alexander Bordoin. one of the leading 19th century Russian composers.

The Morgan singers, with two - piano accompaniment, were held firmly in hand under the capable direction of Mr. Moseley, head of the department of music. Gertrude Wisner, faculty associate director of the choir, and Elizabeth Day, gave excellent support and played the difficult score with confidence.

A history-making venture in the musical and cultural life of the college and began this year by Rodney Mercado, a new member of the music faculty. One-hundred students played Wednesday in the first orchestra of symphonic proportions on the campus of Morgan State College.

WITH THE encouragement of free lessons and instruments at no charge, the students flocked to the venture.

Although only two out of three could read music at the beginning of the semester, the orchestra played with commendable accuracy in attacks, releases, pitch and notes.

Their painstaking study in performing "Grand Waltz" (Mercado) and the conductor's arrangement of the "Andante Cantabile" from Tschaikowsky's 6th Symphony could well be copied by more experienced groups.

A string trio composed of Catherine Neale, pianist; Matthew Fraling, violinist, and Everett Peters, 'cellist, played in satisfactory manner the "Allegro Con Brio" from Beethoven's Trio in A Minor.

At the conclusion of the program, Mr. Mercado extended an invitation to students who "wish to experience joy in playing together" to sign up for the orchestra. Four "student instructors," who assisted in training the orchestra, took a bow.

* * *

DEAN GEORGE GRANT congratulated the music department on the high calibre of the program and the new developments in the cultural life on the campus.

Dr. R. Hayes Strider, chairman of the Festival, stated that one of the aims of the project is to bring to the college community the best in student and professional performance.

A sizeable number of listeners from an impressive list of patrons attended a concert Thursday by Elaine Maurice Taylor, lyric soprano. The event was held in the auditorium of Mt. Sinai Baptist Church, under auspices of the Women's Auxiliary of the Maryland Baptist Convention and the Maryland General Association — Mrs. Eva B. White and Mrs. Edna F. Butler are presidents.

Miss Taylor, a native Baltimorean, who studied with Mrs. Goldie Green and Mrs. Constantia Reckling, graduated from the school of music at Howard University.

Last week the singer presented a well balanced program of Italian arias, Bach chorales, and aria from the opera "Carmen" as well as groups of English songs and spirituals.

Hers is a voice of brilliance and considerable flexibility and strength. Experience in the operatic field would help give her a freer and more expressive style.

Assisting at the piano was Sophie Johnson, accompanist.
