Strolling the Avenue

"It's a woman's world," might well be the theme song of the Avenue this week, for the fairer sex seems to have taken over the entertainment spotlight.

Starting our stroll along the avenue, at Rector's RED FOX, the Poulson Dios are still dispensing their particular brand of musical magic. Ethel Ennis, featured at the piano and on vocal, is a local gal who is really going places.

Still a youngster, Ethel can be remembered by this writer when she made her first professional appearance on Paul Whiteman's TV-Teen show a few years back.

The girl has really blossomed into a smooth performer whose whispered lyrics and delicate touch blend perfectly with the intimate atmosphere of the Red Fox Room.

• • •

ONE OF THE best ways to judge the performance of an entertainer is to watch the barmaids and waitresses. Since they have to listen to the artists do the same routines day after day, if the barmaids are still enthusiastic, the act's got it.

Kept my eye on Vicki Clark, who dispenses the drinks, while the Poulson Duo was on, she's a staunch admirer of the group.

Swung around the corner to the CLUB TIJUANA where the Dorothy Ashby Trio is currently "filling the night with music."

The band was "taking five" when I walked in, but there in the middle of the bandstand was a full-sized harp. Thought perhaps the "House of modern sounds" had decided to go in for classical music—I was wrong.

I have listened to artists before who claimed to be playing a swing harp, but this is the first time a modern sound harpist has been on the scene.

Plus that she sings, and alternates on piano to boot. And what a wondrful sound. Tastefully backed up by Paul Chambers on bass, and John William, drums, the trio produces a full-orchestra sound with Miss Ashby's pyrotechnics on harp, no less than amazing.

The group hails from Detroit, Mich., and Dorothy learned to play the harp at Cass Tech high school.

• • •

TO EAST BALTIMORE—The Swallows are still holding forth at the CLUB AMBASSADOR and the place is really rocking and rolling.

Something is "happening" at this club every night. There's a jam session on Sundays, with Tuesdays, Clothesline night, door prizes on Wednesdays, etc.

On top of all that, guest stars are always popping in to do a stint, and the place really jumps.

Edlow Echols was the cute little barmaid who served the Stroller, and she let me know immediately that there's never a dull moment at the Club Ambassador it rocks all the time.

• • •

DOWN THE ROAD a piece to the CLOVER CLUB where Al Brown and the Tunetoppers keep the people's feet tapping on knobs. A seven-piece band, no less.

Was struck by a sign hanging across the middle of the bar which proclaimed: "We serve double drinks for the price of singles." Naturally, just had to find out at first hand, so I called over the barmaid, who turned out to be Gertrude Booth, and ordered a taste.

Sure enough, she trotted out a double-shot glass, and filled it to the brim.

• • •

BACK TO the Avenue and into the CLUB CLUB where the Sarah McLawler Trio is holding down the stand. Featured with the group is Richard Otto, who makes a violin do everything but dance the mambo.

The trio is exciting to watch mainly because they really enjoy their work. Sarah breathes fire into the organ and vocalizes too. She really "makes herself comfortable," as she kicks off her shoes and pedals up that driving, sound that defies you to sit still.

Richard Otto's violin (it's amplified electronically) blends in with the organ with the precision that marks the truly great artist. One that knows his instrument intimately, and plays from the soul.

To test the versatility of the group, ask them to play the calypso tune "Matilda." They're dynamite.

• • •

JOHNNY SPARROW'S Bows and Arrows are shooting their musical shafts at the CLUB CASINO, which should be 'nuff said. The Sparrow is well-known to Baltimoreans and seems to improve as he goes along.

Applaud my latest reaction test by watching barmaid Geraldine Palmer While the combo is really romping. She was profoundly moved - so was I - so was everybody else in the club. If the Sparrow doesn't move you it's time they said "don't he look natural" over you.

Last stop for the week was at JONES' where proprietor Theodylus Jones promises: "There's always entertainment at this spot. We guarantee you'll have a good time."

Know what? he's right - I did- you will—THE STROLLER.

Candidates dine, all pledge support

By S. EDWARD SMITH

All of the Fourth District Democratic councilmanic candidates ran for the March primary election were invited to dinner last Monday night at the Park Plaza Hotel.

The hosts were Solomon Liss, Max Alpert and Walter T. Dixon, the successful candidates. Judge Liss was acting as chairman for his mates.

There was no rubbing of the noses in the sand of those who were not nominated. In fact, Judge Liss had a difficult time getting words together asking the unsuccessful candidates to support their ticket for a Democratic victory in May.

He pointed out that there was "enough glory for all of us if we work together as Democrats. The party must return to its place in the City of Baltimore and the state, at the top. We must be tired of running scared when we are faced with a Republican at the polls."

• • •

INCUMBENT, Max Alpert, one of the deans of the Council, heaped high praise about the caliber of candidates that opposed him this year.

He asked that race not be injected into the general election and said that the party must stand above all other elements. Walter T. Dixon supported Alpert's contention.

Mr. Dixon said: "All of us have friends all over the Fourth District, white and colored. This is no time for racialidentity." He said that his running mates were sincere with him and helped him immeasurably and would be just as sincere when they are representing the whole district after the May 3rd election.

• • •

AFTER MR. DIXON came all of the others that were present: Richard T. Rombro, Morton Berry, Lloyd Randolph, Melvin Callaman, Josiah Henry, J. Howard Payne, Morgan Amaimo and guest, Ed Smith. All pledged their support to the candidates.

Mr. Randolph told the candidates that there were cardinal improvements that must be made and asked them "to see those who have command of the powers that be and get these things done."

Josiah Henry said he ran just like the late Booker T. Washington had done, "to get to the station."

He said there were many things the Fourth District needed and he felt that if he had won, he would have set these things in motion and got them done.

"Now it is left to you successful candidates. I pledge my unqualified support to your election," he said.

Mr. Alpert introduced a letter written by a local businessman to Al Sandler and the Pollack-backed candidates names and injected farce as a reason they should not be nominated.

Mr. Alpert said he hoped that would be the end of such literature.

It was all harmony and it appears that the Democrats in the Fourth District now have a unified front for the first time in many years.

Man guilty of attacking girl, 12, in bathroom

A 44-year - old man, who coerced a 12-year-old girl to come to his home in the 1600 block Druid Hill Ave. to wash/dress for him and then criminally assaulted her in the bathroom, was found guilty by Judge Herman M. Moser in Criminal Court, this week.

Judge Moser withheld sentence on William Wilson, however, pending a psychiatric examination of the defendant.

Although Wilson Insisted he never touched the child, the little girl testified that he forced her to drink some gin after she had washed the dishes and brought her to the bathroom where he attacked her.

• • •

THE CASE came to light when the girl's mother notified police after her daughter returned home, her hair mussed, clothes unbuttoned and grease stained.

Commenting on the case, Judge Moser said he was impressed by the manner in which the girl testified on the witness stand, "She was frank and honest," he remarked, adding that she comes from a respectable family.

The judge attributed Wilson's act to the possibility that he is "going through the change of life." "I think he had it in mind (to attack the child) when he brought her to his home," Judge Moser said.

'Billy the kid' on Royal screen

The true story of the deadliest killer of our time Billy the Kid is brought to the Royal screen in "The Law Vs. Billy the Kid" in Technicolor and starring Scott Brady and Betta St. John.

This is the bullet-blasting story of the gunman who flees a murder charge for a fight forced upon him, and becomes the bloodiest outlaw of the old west.

"Carnival Atlack" latest jungle adventure starring Johnny Weismuller is the twin attraction. When Weismuller is called by the government to investigate cobalt thefts from a jungle mine he runs smack dang into a cannibal tribe led by a gorgeous man-eating princess.

Recreation Center singer uses racial epithets on TV show

Thomas Ross, a singer on a program sponsored by the South Baltimore Recreation Center entitled the "Golden Age Program," sang a Dixie song in which he frequently used the racial epithet "d-ey" Listener Mrs. Adelaide Reed, 2311 Druid Hill Ave., told the AFRO she complained to WMAR-TV which aired the program (Wednesday 5:15 - 5:30 p.m.) and was advised, "It was a mistake—it won't happen again."

The program was one of many sponsored by the Division of Recreation and Education of Agencies in connection with Community Services Week sponsored by the Council of Social Agencies.

In addition to Mr. Ross, other singers on the show were Emma Epsey, Jenny Hackett, Charles Grieb, George Obrecht and Thomas Sanford.

Burned to death

Ten-year-old Madaline Lee of 3:25 a.m. as a result of severe 3:35 a.m. as a result of severe burns received in an unexplained accident at her home.

Madaline was admitted to Provident Hospital at 9:05 Thursday night suffering from burns of the body. She died before she was able to give authorities an account of the cause of the accident.

According to a police report from the Northwestern District, Madeline was left at her home by her nine-year-old sister, Edna Mae, who left the house to go to a store.

MADALINE, IT WAS said, told her sister, she planned to heat some water on the gas stove. A few minutes after the sister left the house, Madaline ran screaming up to the apartment of Mrs. Martha McDaniels on the second floor, her clothes afire.

Mrs. McDanials pulled the flaming clothes from the body of the girl and asked what had happened. The girl, however, was unable to speak. She was taken to the hospital where she died without relating the details of the accident.

She is the daughter of Mrs. Bernice Lee. The father is dead, police reported.
