Friends of Music appear in recital

The Friends of Music Group 3wae resented in recital at Trinity Baptist Church Sunday afternoon under the direction of Mrs. Susie O. Dickerson.

The proceeds from the concert will be used in connection with Women's Day services to be held Sunday at St. John's AME Church.

Following the program, whose participants included guest artists from several different churches, Mrs. Dickerson was commended for her work with the group and presented with a gift purchased through the contributions of her former pupils and their parents.

The presentation, the idea of Mrs. Mildred Ford, was made by Mrs. Judge Henry Watkins.

Others who contributed to the success of the program included The Rev. V. Stokes, pastor of the host church; Mrs. Helen Johnson, Mrs. Clara Hicks and Pursell Taylor.

AT HARLEM—William Talman holds a gun on Dana Andrews while Piper Laurie, Douglas Spencer, William Schallert and Gordon Jones wait for the tension to break in this scene from Universal-International's "Smoke Signal," now playing at the Harlem Theatre. The story of a perilous trek down the Colorado River to escape the Ute Indian war party was filmed in the Grand Canyon. Rex Reason is also starred.

LOVELY VERA RALSTON confronts David Brian with her knowledge of his villainy in Republic's lavish Trucolor drama, "Timberjack" now at the Met Theatre.

'First Run' Films of The Week in Review

SUSAN HAYWARD STARS IN FILM AT REGENT

"Untamed" gives a new meaning to the era of big pictures. In a time of many notable films, the Regent Theatre's new attraction stands out as one of the most novel distinguished as much by its grandeur of scale as its degree of success.

Produced in CenemaScope with color by DeLuxe and starring Tyrone Power, Susan Hayward and Richard Egan, "Untam ed" comes with built-in name power, and will fully impress all who are drawn to it.

The story of the irresistible passion of a headstrong Irish girl for a leader of the Boers, set in the middle of the 19th century, "Untamed" was largely filmed in its actual South African locations which remain unchanged by time.

Director Henry King led a huge crew of technicians on a three-month trip to Africa, where most of the exteriors were photographed.

AS THE IRISH girl who sacrifices her husband and uses the ardor of a sinister Boer in her pursuit of the Boer leader whose first passion remains the wresting of a Boer free state from the Zulu warriors, Susan Hayward gives one of her most exceptional performances—at once the fough renegade, the soft romantic, the radiant beauty.

As the object of her affections, who cannot subordinate his passion for a Boer homeland in the Dark Continent, the redoubtable Tyrone Power reveals unsuspected depths.

And Richard Egan, a comparatively recent addition to the star ranks, fully justifies his billing as the malevolent Boer whom Miss Hayward skillfully manipulates.

OBSIOUSLY, CenemaScope was made for "Untamed" and the picture returns the compliment.

On a Zulu preserve in the Bailey of the Thousand Hills, Director King has staged massive scenes of battle action, to dwarf any past representation of Africa on the screen.

In a spectacular action scene, the attack of the Laager, you will be spellbound by the exciting movement achieved with the use of several thousands of Zulus.

Chief among the supporting players are John Justin, Agnes Moorehead, Rita Moreno, Hope Emerson, Brad Dexter, Henry O'Neill and Paul Thompson.

"SMOKE SINGAN" ON HARLEM THEATRE SCREEN

Try to imagine the tension and terror of riding the ragind Colorado river in a rowboat while rampaging Ute Indians lusting for your blook, thunder along the fully dramatic situation that makes Universal-International's "Smoke Signal" a tremendous picture.

Starring Dana Andrews, Piper Laurie, Rex Reason and William Talman, "Smoke Signal" was presented in print by Technicolor at the Harlem Theatre Wednesday.

This was a handful of desparate people, survivors of an outpost Indian massacre, who had no escape route save the man-killing torrents of the never-before-mastered Colorado.

There is Dana Andrews, the renegade awaiting courtmartial and death, who alone knows the terrain well enough to bring the band through alive.

There is Piper Laurie, who has most reason to hate Andrews, one of his possessions.

The savage murder of Verna's kindly father leads to a smashing climax.

SPENCER TRACY IN FILM NOW AT NEW ALBERT

"Bad Day at Black Rock," an M-G-M picture in CenemaScope and color, is now playing at the New Albert Theatre, with an outstanding cast headed by Spencer Tracy and Robert Ryan and co-starring Ann Francis, Dean Jagger, Walter Brennan, John Ericson, Ernest Borgaine, Lee Marvin and Russell Collins.

Of these stars, three—Tracy, Jagger and Brenan—are Acade my Award winners.

Gripping drama of a communi- ty fear, the story tells what happens when a man arrives unannounded in a desolate desert town and finds himself thrust into a suspenseful and murderous crisis not of his own making.

How he turns to meet it squarely makes for one of the year's most unusual and most exciting motion pictures, one completely off the beaten track and wielding an unforgettable dramatic punch.

THE PICTURE was filmed almost entirely out of doors against some of the most colorful backgrounds of the West near Mt. Whitney and desolate Death Valley, with its location sequences requiring the building of an entire town in the desert.

Spencer Tracy plays the central figure of the man who comes to Black Rock and becomes the victim of a web of murderous intrigue. It is his first appearance since his recent hit in "Broken Lance."

Billy Daniels marks 25th anniversary

NEW YORK (ANP) — Celebrating his 25th year in show business, Billy ("That Old Black Magic") Daniels has been "packing them in" at New York's famed Copocobana club.

Daniels, noted for his expressive gestures, is credited with infusing a new style into modern song styling.

Moments Musical

By ADAH K. JENKINS

The Maryland State Con - ference Branches of the NAACP presented Mattie Shelton in a recent concert at Douglas Memorial Community Church. The singer, a native of Washington, D.C., is a statuesque, queenly young woman, with a remarkably clear and flexible coloratura soprano voice.

Of the various types of sopranos the coloratura is perhaps the most exciting to hear and Miss Shelton did not disappoint her audience. There were runs and thrills of dazzling range aplenty, most of them well pitched.

She was programmed as a "dramatic coloratura," which type of voice has more depth and expressive qualities than the pure coloratura.

Baltimoreans of an older generation throlled to that kind of singing by the late Sissereta Jones, known on the stage as "Black Patti."

Miss Shelton is studying with Frank Bibb, noted voice coach of Peabody Conservatory, who was present at the concert.

Her accompanist was Dorothy Emery, who taught the singer at Oberlin Conservatory of Music

There are a number of operatic arias that composers wrote especially to show off the fine voices of noted singers of their generations. Often complete cadenzas (showy runs) were added to a solo to suit the powers of some great vocalist.

Altho "One Fine Day" from "Madame Butterfly" and "Ah Fers Lui" from "Traviata" were not written particularly for the coloratura, they afforded some fine moments of singing by Miss Shelton.

"Villanelle" in the group of French songs, turned out to be "Oft Have I seen the Swift Swallow," that echoed thru concert halls as a great favorite in the gay 90s.

"Springtime" (Adito) was another selection full of vocal gymnastics. The famous Mozart "Aledia" was also brilliantly sung. In the meditative numbers, of a more quiet native, such as Hageman's "Do not Go My Love" and "At the Well," more convincing lines in the lower register would have made for a fuller interpretation.

There was considerable warmth in the group of spiritu- als which closed the concert.

During the intermission Mrs. Lillie M. Jackson, president of the Maryland State Conference NAACP, introduced a number of the state officials. The concert was conducted by George

"A-ROVING WE WOULD GO"

The 50-voice Choir of Morgan State College will go on its annual tour March 29 thru April 6, under the direction of J. Orville Mossley, director of the music department.

The itinerary will include concerts at Winston-Salem State Teachers College, Chattanooga College in Knoxville, Tenn. Junior College in Memphis, Alabama State Teacher's College, Wheat Street Baptist Church in Atlanta and A. and T. College in Greensboro, N.C.

The repertoire includes an unusual correlation of music and art, arranged by director Mossley and Dr. Chas. W. Stallings, of the Morgan College Art Department.

During the rendition of Faure's "Requiem," will be pictures in color of great art works in the Sistine Chapel. During the second half of the concert pictures from the Stallings mural (which is in the refectory at Morgan) will be used during the singing of spirituals and other American folk songs.

The Morgan choir has sung on previous tours in Washington, Philadelphia, New York, Detroit, Cleveland and Youngstown, Ohio Pittsburgh and Wheeling, W. Va. One intercultural project was an exchange concert with Bowling Green University in Ohio.

In the struggle for freedom and justice, music has played a prominent role. Captive races and groups throughout the centuries have sung of their sorrows and hopes for liberation. When their capitors forbade free assembly and speech, sentiments were expressed in folk songs. Uprisings and revolutions have also inspired writers, and national anthems were the result.

nosed as an ulcer condition and he was treated several times in the next few days.

Mr. Goodstein said that on Saturday night, Charlie, the Baroness and her 18-year-old daughter were watching the Tommy Dorsey show when a jugling act came on.

THE THREE of them were laughing, Mr. Goodstein said, when Parker began coughing. He died moments later. Just a half hour before, he had been attended by a doctor.

An autopsy performed the following day showed that Parker died from lobar pneumonia.

The musician's wife, Mrs. Chan Parker, learned of her husband's death on Monday night, while visiting her family in New Hope, Pa.

MR. GOODSTEIN said that the Baroness and her husband, who is a French diplomat, were great lovers of progressive jazz and made frequent visits to Birdland, "the jazz corner of the world." The Baroness has five children, Mr. Goodstein said.

Mr. Goodstein told the AFRO that he considered Parker to be the "greatest also-saxophonist in the world.

"He was a musical genius," the cafe manager said, "and was without peers."

MR. GOODSTEIN said that when the news of Parker's death reached Birdland early Sunday morning, patrons and musicians wept openly.

"I have never seen so many strong men break down and cry," the manager said.

Birdland has been flooded with calls from all over the country since the announcement of Parker's death.

WARDELL GRAY, well-known tenor saxophone player, called from California, Mr. Goodstein said.

"Oscar, please tell me it's a lie," Gray repeated frantically.

"I wish it had been untrue," Mr. Goodstein told the AFRO.

ALTHOUGH PARKER leaves behind a great contribution to modern jazz, it is believed that he left little money.

It is known that he had a $1,000 policy with a New York musician's union. His mother, who lives in Pennsylvania, is named as beneficiary.

Parker who lived at 4 Barrow St., NYC, is also survived by two

Money from the April 3 benefit will be turned over to Parksons, 12 and 3.

those scheduled to appear are: George Shearing, Erroll Garner, Sarah Vaughan, Dinah Washington, Dizzy Gillespie, Stan Getz, Charlie Mingus and Bud Powell.

Mr. Goodstein said that Lenny Tristano who has been in retirement for two years, has called together his original jazz group of Lee Konitz, Warren Marsh, Billy Baner and Arnold Fishkin to play a final tribute to Parker.

DIZZY, WHO is handling all the money and arrangements, first met Parker back in the 1940's when New York's 52nd St. was the jazz lane of America.

Parker had come East from Kansas City where he was a member of Jay MacShan's band.

Dizzy and "The Bird" collaborated in the founding of "cool" music which some jazz addicts call "bop."

PARKER REPORTEDLY had what is known as "a habit," and had frequent brushes with authorities.

A New York columnist wrote: "The Bird was gentle and amiable. He was a lost artist who never hurt anybody but himself."

"The Bird" is dead.
